Storm Enumerates Inadequacies of Department; Gives Probers a Program

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Inspector Walter T. Storm yesterday testified that Police Department inadequacies are "hampering law enforcement" and acting as a "detriment to the community."

A veteran of 26 years on the force, Storm gave Congressional crime probers an eight-point program to right the wrongs.

Storm said he was speaking for himself, and had not discussed his program with Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett.

"I'm sure he would agree with me, but we have not discussed the problems specifically," he said.

Storm is supervising inspector in charge of the Communications and Records Bureau and head of the Police Department training division.

Training Criticized

Concerning his own responsibilities, Storm said training of rookie policemen "may be adequate, but it is not sufficient."

"It has been clearly shown at this inquiry that there is a lack of integration among the various law enforcement agencies and authorities in Washington," Storm stated.

Storm admitted that a Federal law requiring Washington police to screen arrested persons for drug addiction and insanity had "been relegated to the limbo" for at least 26 years.

Veterans of the Police Department are also inadequately trained, Storm said.

Program Offered

Speaking in clipped, precise tones in answer to questions by Hyman I. Fischbach, counsel for the House District subcommittee investigating Washington crime, Storm offered this concrete program:

1. Modernize Title 4, of the District Code, which deals with the Police Department. "Probably 100 sections of that title need revision," he said. "Some of the sections were written as far back as 1868. There have been no major revisions since 1901. Law enforcement would benefit and so would the community."

2. Reestablish the Police Academy, which he said has existed since July 7, 1947 on paper only. The academy gave veterans

Sales Tax Hike Of Cent Tied To Bonus Bill

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28. — The Maryland House of Delegates tonight added five amendments to the controversial bonus bill and sent it on its way to its final House hurdle.

The amendments, offered by both Republicans and Democrats, converted the bill into a grab-bag, resembling neither fish nor fowl.

Heeding a warning from Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., that he would veto the bonus bills in their present form, the House voted favorably on three amendments which set up a system of financing the proposal by adding one cent to the existing two-cent sales tax.

The legislators seemed to concur with Lane in his call for a sound financing proposal and many voted for the amendments who had said they would vote against the passage of the bills.

Introduced by Reeves

But in two succeeding amendments, both introduced by John R. Reeves, Montgomery County Republican, the bill was made to apply not only to veterans of World War II but also to veterans of World War I, and if the bill passes the referendum to the people will carry this statement: "'For soldier's bonus and for increase in the sales tax,' and 'Against Soldier's bonus and against increase in the sales tax.'"

Reeves said, "I dont' like this bill. I believe it is wrong. But if we're going to have it, let's have it fairly and honestly."

He contended that the statement on the referendum would be the only way to keep from "deluding" the people of Maryland on the issues invoked.

Although his amendment passed by a voice vote, some delegates thought it lessened chances of the bonus succeeding in the referendum.

Earlier, in a special message to both Houses, Lane warned the legislators that the proposed bonus bills have the effect of "deluding the taxpayers into believing that a bonus is possible without additional taxation."

Lane said he simply cannot consider anything which would use up

Human Rights Bill Approved 5 to 2 by Senate Committee

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A bill to create a commission on human rights here cleared its first legislative hurdle late yesterday, passing the Senate District Committee by a 5-2 vote.

Committee approval followed a testy tangle, and after Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) barely won his usual fight for a working quorum of at least seven members.

Voting for the bill were Senators Neely, Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), Joseph W. McCarthy (R., Wis.), Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.) and Lester W. Hunt (D., Wyo.).

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) voted "no" on final approval after losing 5-2 an amendment to limit commission investigation to "unlawful" racial dis-

Heat Reduced In Federal Offices Here

The Federal Government has only a two-week supply of coal left here if the strike and cold weather continue.

This was disclosed last night by the General Services Administration in advising the Government's 210,000 employes in this area to put on those flannel "long johns" and a heavy sweater today.

Even Uncle Sam is running low on coal now and starting late yesterday, temperatures in Government buildings were ordered reduced to an average of 68 degrees from the usual 72-74 golden warmth.

The District government ordered the heat in its agencies cut to the 68-degree level almost two weeks ago and called on other Washington building operators to use conservation measures since the supplies could not last long at usual consumption rates.

Yesterday J. Thomas Kennedy, chairman of the District Fuel Coordinating Committee, indicated the city has about a week's supply in bins and supposedly en route, plus the present stocks in coal-using buildings.

The coal shipments are uncertain since railroads have announced they will confiscate coal as needed for their own essential uses.

Washington apartment and office building operators are cutting down on heat as their coal supplies dwindle.

District schools will remain open the remainder of this week and at least the first half of next, Associate Superintendent John M. Riecks assured.

Coal Parleys Are Resumed; Hope Is Feeble

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Suspended coal peace talks will be resumed by John L. Lewis and the operators today, as the contempt trial of the United Mine Workers enters the third day.

Revival of the negotiations—set for 11 a. m. at the Statler—again stirred new, albeit feeble, hope that an approach to peace in the long-drawn contract dispute and strike of 370,000 soft-coal miners might be in the offing.

However, there was no indication of optimism to be found in the second day's trial of the UMW on the charge that the union had failed to end the work stoppage of the soft-coal miners, despite a Federal Court injunction.

Yesterday the Government, through Assistant Attorney General H. Graham Morison, sought to show that the present strike was similar to the miners' walkout of 1946, and that the miners in the

Sothoron Home Rule Bill For Prince Georges Passed

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—The bill to streamline Prince Georges County's government tonight cleared its last hurdle in the House of Delegates.

The bill was finally passed on third reading by a voice vote and now faces ratification by the Senate. The measure, introduced by Senator L. Harold Sothoron, spells out the specific powers under which the County Commissioners may govern.

In pleading for its passage on an emergency basis, Senator Sothoron told his colleagues that a flaw in the 1949 act rendered existing legislation ineffective so far as it would designate the number of commissioners.

When the bill came up for final House action tonight, Montgomery County Delegate R. Duncan Clark (R.) asked Speaker Pro Tem Perry O. Wilkinson of Prince Georges County if the bill was a local bill.

"Does it preserve the one-party system in Prince Georges County?" Clark asked.

"Yes," Wilkinson said.

Leroy Pumphrey, majority leader, and another Prince Georgian, told delegates that the bill "corrects a very serious mistake that had to be corrected."

In answer to another question from Clark, he assented that the bill is the "so-called Sothoron charter." The six Montgomery County delegates asked to be excused from voting on the measure.

The bill, in effect, would give the commissioners added power to bypass the General Assembly on legislation of a specifically local nature. Under existing law, all government changes in the county must be submitted to the Assembly for approval.

the measure calls for a full time commissioner at $7500 a year. It jumps to two the number of weekly meetings which the county commissioners would hold. It eliminates the county merit system. It calls for an annual audit of county budget, sets up tighter fiscal control and requires publication of the county's effective ordinances.

Matthews Is Rebuked On Denfeld

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday sharply criticized Administration chiefs for firing Admiral Louis E. Denfeld as chief of naval operations.

However, the group refused to go further and call for the criminal prosecution of Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews under a statute barring the influencing or intimidation of Congressional witnesses.

They characterized Matthews' ouster of Denfeld as a "reprisal" for his Congressional testimony criticizing Administration defense policy.

These actions were taken at a closed session of the committee during which it approved a lengthy report on the group's investigation last fall of Navy protests against Pentagon policies.

Members Disclose Contents

The report was distributed for publication in afternoon papers today, but members disclosed some of its contents in speeches and statements last night.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) said in a House speech that the committee had voted 22 to 8 to label the ouster of Denfeld by Matthews a "reprisal" for his testimony during last fall's hearings.

As the Secretary of the Navy has repeatedly denied that Denfeld was removed from office because of his critical testimony, this was viewed as a slap at Matthews.

Other members revealed that Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) had offered a motion to ask the Department of Justice to bring criminal charges against the Secretary on the ground that his action would prevent future Navy witnesses from speaking their mind before congressional committees. This motion was beaten, 20 to 11, it was said, after heated debate.

Statement By Rep. Walsh

Later, Representative John R. Walsh (D., Ind.) issued a statement declaring:

"Without hearing Secretary of the Navy Matthews or Secretary of Defense Johnson on the matter of the removal of Denfeld, a majority of the committee voted for a prepared report branding Denfeld's removal as a 'reprisal' for his testimony before the House Armed Services Committee.

"This action was clearly motivated to embarass President Truman, Secretary Johnson and Secretary Matthews; and again it clearly shows the unholy alliance between Dixiecrats and Republicans. While Rome burns the politicians fiddle."

Admiral Denfeld joined other Navy admirals last fall in attacking Department of Defense war plans—particularly the emphasis on strategic bombing—and contended the Navy was not getting a square deal from the top Pentagon command. After his removal from office, he chose to retire rather than accept a lesser post. His retirement becomes effective today.

Ceiling Placed on Funds

Tight Loyalty Test Is Voted Into Science Foundation Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

One of the tightest loyalty checks yet imposed on any Federal agency yesterday was tied to the Administration's National Science Foundation bill nearing passage in the House.

An amendment offered by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) requires individual FBI clearance of every employe of the foundation and applies the same rigid screening to scholarships awarded by the proposed agency.

Final action on the Senate-passed measure went over until today after Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), floor manager of the bill, "accepted" the Smith amendment and the House approved it by a voice vote.

Earlier the House voted to put a ceiling on appropriations for the foundation, limiting the first year's authorization to $500,000, and outlays thereafter to 15 million dollars annually.

Designed to promote and correlate basic research in the sciences, the National Science Foundation bill was called up under the 21-day discharge rule in the House Monday after the Rules Committee had long blocked it.

A key point in the Truman program since 1945, the President nonetheless killed the initial bill passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress by a pocket veto, on the ground that it failed to follow sound administrative policies.

Priest argued that the pending bill already contained adequate security safeguards. Recipients of scholarships are required to file an anti-Communist affidavit and employes of the agency would be subject to the same loyalty check as other Federal personnel, he said.

But Smith told the House he had "serious misgivings" about the bill. Existing loyalty checks, he contended, are not adequate for an agency that will deal with "the

Attlee Keeps All His Key Men, Makes Few Changes in Cabinet

London (Wednesday), March 1 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee chose a cabinet of seasoned fighters today to mastermind the wobbly Labor government's coming battle for its life.

However, he made a half dozen changes in the old lineup.

With a Labor majority of only seven in the new 625-seat House of Commons, Attlee retained his key advisers—Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps and Health Minister Aneurin Bevan.

At the same time, he kept Hugh Dalton on his top staff by naming him Minister of Town and Country Planning and adding the job to his old 17-man cabinet. The new ministry was raised to fifth in order of importance. Dalton previously was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a trouble-shooting job.

Five Other Changes

There were five other changes in the cabinet, announced a few hours before the first session of the new Parliament. But Attlee used the broom among his non-cabinet ministers.

Viscount Alexander of Hillsborough, former Defense Secretary, moved to Dalton's old seat in the Duchy of Lancaster.

Emanuel Shinwell, former Secretary of State for War, was moved up to the defense post.

James Griffiths, Minister of National Insurance, was promoted to Secretary of State for Colonies, a post vacated by Arthur Creech Jones upon his failure to win reelection Thursday.

Hector McNeil, Minister of State, was promoted to the post of Secretary of State for Scotland, succeeding Arthur Woodburn, who was dropped from the first-string lineup.

In the biggest jump of all, Patrick C. Gordon-Walker was moved up from the undersecretaryship to become the new Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations. He succeeds Philip Noel-Baker, who relinquished his cabinet post to become Minister of Fuel and Power.

The cabinet newcomers are Gordon-Walker, Shinwell, Griffiths and McNeil.

Truman Opens Red Cross Fund Drive

President Truman opened the Red Cross campaign for 1950 by appealing last night to all Americans to respond to "a great humanitarian appeal."

Mr. Truman spoke at the conclusion of a Red Cross radio program carried over three Nation-wide radio networks. He was introduced by Gen. George C. Marshall, Red Cross national chairman.

"After all," the President reminded, "the Red Cross interests itself almost solely in meeting human needs . . . Here is an agency that has become almost indispensable in our community life today. It is a neighborly service. At the same time, its help is available to distressed people around the world."

The Red Cross officially opens its campaign for 67 million dollars today.

The program, narrated by Actor Henry Fonda, was in the form of a documentary dramatization.

One of the participants was 13-year-old Mike Loughrin of 1503 30th st. nw. Critically ill since last summer, the youngster has received blood from the District Red Cross blood center.

Mike's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Loughrin, and a "pal" who gave blood, Policeman John J. Daly of 5308 41st st. nw., also were heard via transcription.

Both Mr. Truman and General Marshall praised the two million volunteer workers who will solicit funds for the Red Cross.

The President said "the Red Cross is flexible enough to provide aid which is entirely personal, yet strong enough to deal with major disasters involving hundreds of thousands of individuals."

Denounces Disloyalty In Testimony To Senators

Secretary Asserts He Does Not Condone Offenses Charged To Former Aide

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson stood up to his critics yesterday by explaining and defending his now-famous statement that "I will not turn my back on Alger Hiss."

He said he did not condone the offenses charged to Hiss, he did not challenge the verdict, and he "would never knowingly tolerate any disloyal person in the Department of State."

But, he declared, his personal attitude toward Hiss was something no court or government or public opinion could decide for him, for it was founded on "the Christian ethic" and was a matter for his own individual conscience.

The Secretary spoke up after a few Republican Senators had badgered him about loyalty matters during an Appropriations subcommittee hearing.

Although the State Department budget was the subject of the hearing, some committee members repeatedly questioned Acheson and Undersecretary John E. Peurifoy about Hiss and about security within the department.

Bridges Asks Question

At one point Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) asked whether "a friend of a person convicted for perjury in connecton with a treasonable act" would be considered a bad security risk.

Acheson appeared to ignore the slap and answered, in an icy voice, that he thought such a matter would have to be looked into.

The questioning went on—about "Russian spies," about the alleged shielding of "a known spy," about the State Department's loyalty files and its security procedures.

Finally, as the committee was about to adjourn, Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) asked whether the Secretary didn't want to comment on his own public statement about Hiss, the statement of January 25 which stirred up so much controversy.

"I have no desire to make any comment," Acheson answered, "but if the committee wishes me to explain what I said I'll do it."

He reached into a briefcase and pulled out a typewritten statement. The klieg lights went on in the stuffy committee room, and Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), sitting opposite the Secretary, leaned intently across the table so he could hear more clearly.

"No Desire to Do This"

"I have no desire to do this," Acheson repeated coldly. He said he had been "so harassed by misrepresentations" of his January 25 statement, and felt so sure that any further statement would be misrepresented, that he had "written something down."

"I hope this will close the matter for good and all," he said. There was a hushed silence in the committee room, broken only by the whirring of a camera, as the Secretary started reading.

First he sought to dispose of the

'Disgraced' State Dept. Aide, Missing Here, Found Poisoned

A "disgraced" State Department staff officer was in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital last night, apparently from an overdose of sleeping capsules.

Less than 24 hours earlier, Washington police had arrested Harry M. Crain, 51, as a fugitive from justice in Colorado.

Then developments came rapidly. Crain was freed at 1:30 a. m. yesterday when a professional bondsman posted $1000 bail at police headquarters.

Crain immediately disappeared. Last night, at 8:15 o'clock, police received a call that an unconscious man had been found in a room at the Hamilton Hotel.

"It was Crain," said Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, "although he had registered under the name of M. H. Benton of Russellville, Ky."

Crain, who is accused of embezzling $2400 at the Colorado School of Mines where, until three weeks ago, he was an associate professor of English, had written a brief note to his wife, Maurine, at the Claridge Hotel, police said.

The note read:

"Maurine, please have no funeral services and cremate me as cheaply as possibly. Love, Harry."

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said Crain entered the service of the State Department on February 20 when he was sworn in as a foreign service staff officer.

Crain, he said, was slated to go to Korea as an instructor in English at an annual salary of $7710. He had qualified as a foreign service staff officer, Class 3.

McDermott said Crain was separated from the service yesterday morning. The grounds were:

According to McDermott, Crain left the Colorado School of Mines, at Golden, Colo., on February 18 after two years as an associate professor and came to Washington.

And, according to Sherriff Carl E. Enlow of Jefferson County, Colo., an audit of the students' publication fund, administered by Crain, disclosed a $2400 shortage a few days later.

The sheriff said he received information several days ago that Crain had headed for Washington.

Strand Will Go Legitimate; Lease May Be Signed Today

By Richard L. Coe
Post Reporter

The American National Theater and Academy—ANTA—hopes to sign a lease today for the Strand Theater, Ninth and D sts. nw.

Final announcement of the signing will come from the offices of Senators Flanders and Douglas, who have been active in ANTA's search to find a suitable Washington home for the legitimate theater.

Should the theater be available within six weeks, which is thought possible, Rodgers and Hammerstein have been approached to open the house with the first performance by their "South Pacific" touring company.

Once the Academy of Music, opened in 1889, the Strand has been a movie house for many years. Its seating capacity of about 2000 has impressed members of New York's Committee of Theatrical Producers, who have agreed to send their productions to the theater.

Strand audiences will conform to Actors' Equity non-segregation requirements.

The Strand is owned and operated by 89-year-old Marcus Notes of Baltimore, whose recent illness has postponed official signing of the lease.

The transaction has been in the works for some weeks on a hush-hush basis, ANTA fearing adverse publicity because of delays in getting a lease for the Belasco. The Belasco project has not been dropped, and ANTA lawyers still are trying to get the smaller house on Madison Place at Lafayette Park.

Members of New York's Committee of Theatrical Producers are chipping in to pay the cost of refurnishing the Strand. The group's interest assures full booking for the theater.

With the Gayety opening as a legitimate theater Monday with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Ninth st. will soon have a corner on the Capital's "live" theater.

Unusual Object In Sky Puzzles Astronomers

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—A mysterious, fast-moving object has appeared high in the northern sky, Harvard Observatory announced today. Astronomers said it was "way out of the normal belt for asteroids" and "hasn't got a tail like most comets."

"It's one of the most unusual objects sighted in the sky in some time," Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory, said. "So far, it can only be seen with a powerful telescope, but within 24 hours we may know a lot more about it."

Shapley said observers in various parts of the Nation are trying to make out the strange object and determine its exact orbit. Dr. C. D. Shane, director of Lick Observatory in California, who first reported the object, said it "probably" is an asteroid.

Coplon Case Jurors Given Purse Data

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The Government today presented in court the contents of a woman's purse—some of the evidence with which it hopes to convict Judith Coplon and Russian engineer Valentin Gubitchev of espionage conspiracy.

The Government is expected to rest its case Wednesday.

Its case hinges on the contents of Miss Coplon's purse last March 4, the night she and Gubitchev were arrested. Her purse held 39 documents which the Government charges contained secret Justice Department information she planned to pass on to Gubitchev.

After Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan ruled the papers admissable, the Government began reading them to the jury

The Government also introduced as evidence a plain white envelope containing $125 in crisp new bills. This was taken from Gubitchev's pocket the night he was arrested.

All the papers introduced today had been introduced in Miss Coplon's Washington trial, where she was sentenced to 40 months to 10 years in jail for stealing Government secrets.

The papers included a hastily prepared memo in Miss Coplon's handwriting giving the contents of a "planted" report which had been shown her on March 3 by her boss. This report concerned Justice Department "informants" in the Russian purchasing agency Amtorg.

'Mystery Man'

New Witness In Red Probe Is Identified

The House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday identified John L. Sherman, alias Henry Chase, of Los Angeles, as the "mystery witness" who will open its renewed investigation of the Red spy case.

The committee had planned to question Sherman at a public hearing yesterday. But it failed twice. Sherman at morning and afternoon sessions, to muster the necessary quorum of committee members and the hearing was postponed until 10 a. m. today.

Committee Counsel Frank S. Tavenner, jr., refused to say what connection Sherman is alleged to have with Alger Hiss, former State Department official convicted of lying when he denied slipping Government secrets to a prewar Red spy ring.

But Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.), a committee member, said Monday the witness was one of several persons named in secret testimony by Whittaker Chambers, former Communist who accused Hiss.

Velde said the witness refused to answer questions at the closed hearing.

Fatal Pa. Auto Crash May Yield Strike Data

The House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday ordered the seizure of papers found in an automobile which figured in a fatal accident in Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Committee officials said they want to study the papers to find out whether they have any bearing on activities of the Labor Youth League in connection with the soft coal strike.

Committee officials said they understand the papers contain names of persons sent into the coal fields by the Labor Youth League.

Matthew Cvetic, who worked his way up in the Communist Party while serving as an FBI under-cover agent, told the committee recently he understood 50 persons had been sent into the mining areas to distribute food and propaganda. Cvetic said the Labor Youth League was completely dominated by the Communist Party.

At Meetings With Bridges, Ex-Red Says

San Francisco, Feb. 28 (AP).—Ex-Communist Mervin Rathborne, a former CIO official, told a Federal jury yesterday he attended many Communist meetings with Harry Bridges.

Rathborne, a rebuttal witness, corroborated testimony given by other former Communists in the Government's attempt to prove that Bridges perjured himself when at his 1945 naturalization hearing he denied Communist party membership.

Co-defendants with the president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO) in the perjury trial are two union aides, J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt. They are charged with conspiracy.

Rathborne said he joined the party in 1935 and was kicked out in 1947 when his differences with party policy became irreconcilable.

Missing Aide Poison Victim

Fugative squad detectives picked up Crane late Monday night at the Claridge Hotel where he was registere with his wife.

J. B. Goldsmith, a professional bondsman, posted the $100 for Crain's freedom.

This was at 1:30 a. m. Goldsmith said he drove Crain to the Claridge and dropped him in front of the hotel. He said he learned later that Crain never had entered the hotel.

The Hamilton Hotel management told police that "M. H. Benton" (identified by police as Crain) checked in at 1:54 a. m.

Shortly after 8 p. m., Florence Bowman, a housekeeper, entered Crain's room and found him unconscious.

Arraignment Continued

Crain did not appear when his case was called in Municipal Court yesterday morning before Judge Walter J. Casey. The judge continued the arraignment until March 7.

The Colorado sheriff said by long-distance telephone that he has airmailed to Washington a formal warrant for Crain's arrest.

Goldsmith said Crain's wife collapsed when she learned of her husband's arrest and disappearance and was placed under the care of a physician.

The Crains have two children, Mrs. D. C. Danielson of Milwaukee, and Harry M. Crain, jr., of Casper, Wyo. Police said Mrs. Danielson left Milwaukee yesterday for Washington after hearing of her father's arrest.

Housing Measure Is Reported Out By Senate Group

By The Associated Press

President Truman's cooperative housing program for middle-income families was both praised and denounced in the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

A seven-member majority of the committee said in a report to the Senate that the program is "sound and desirable," and added:

"Its adoption would provide an effective means through which a broad range of middle-income families, particularly those with children, can obtain housing adequate to their needs."

A minority report filed by three other members said the bill is contrary to sound economic and fiscal policy, and "prejudices individual effort and responsibility."

The majority report was submitted by Senators Maybank (D., S. C.), the committee chairman; Sparkman (D., Ala.), Taylor (D., Idaho), Douglas (D., Ill.), Flanders (R., Vt.), Frear (D., Del.), and Long (D., La.).

The minority document was signed by Senators Bricker (R., Ohio), Capehart (R., Ind.), and Robertson (D., Va.).

Acheson's Statement on Hiss

Statement by Secretary of State Dean Acheson before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee:

I have been asked to explain the statement which I made in regard to Alger Hiss on the 25th of January in the light of various criticisms which have been leveled at it; such as, that it impugned proceedings before a United States court; that it should not have been made; that it condoned the offense for which Mr. Hiss was tried; and so forth.

FIRST, I stated, as clearly as I could, that I would not discuss in any manner whatever the charges against Mr. Hiss, since those charges were then, as they are now, before a court. This is a principle of the most fundamental importance. No one who was brought up in the law, as I was, by Mr. Justice Brandeis and Mr. Justice Holmes, can have the faintest doubt of the transcendent importance of practicing this principle in the strictest possible way.

I have been a member of the bar for 30 years. I have never departed from this principle, and I never expect to do so. Therefore, I did not in my former statement, nor shall I now, discuss the charges in this case in any way, either directly or indirectly. The duty of passing upon them rests with the court, and the court should not be, in any manner whatever, embarrassed or prejudiced in performing this duty.

SECOND. I have been asked why I did not let the matter rest with what I have just said. There seemed to me public and private reasons why this could not be done.

At the time of my confirmation, the Senate committee before which I appeared inqured of me regarding my relations with Mr. Hiss. This is clearly indicative of the committee's belief that the matter was relevant to my fitness for the office. Many of those who have criticized my statement give further ground for this belief. It has been charged, for instance, that what I said indicates that I am not qualified for the office which I hold.

I do not agree with this view, but it surely indicates that some persons believe that my views in this matter are relevant to the question of my fitness for the office and that, therefore, the public is entitled to know my views.

At any rate, the question which was put to me was directed toward bringing them out, and the issue was, therefore, presented whether I should state them or withhold them.

There were also personal reasons for stating my attitude. One must be true to the things by which one lives. The counsels of discretion and cowardice are appealing. The safe course is to avoid situations which are disagreeable and dangerous. Such a course might get one by the issue of the moment, but it has bitter and evil consequences.

In the long days and years which stretch beyond that moment of decision one must live with one's self, and the consequences of living with a decision which one knows has sprung from timidity and cowardice go to the roots of one's life. It is not merely a question of peace of mind, although that is vital; it is a matter of integrity of character. This is the most fundamental of all considerations.

For these reasons it seemed, and it still seems, to me that there was no alternative to saying what I said.

THIRD. The attitude which one who has known and worked with Mr. Hiss, will take toward him in his deep trouble is a matter for the individual conscience to decide. It isn't a matter which a court, or public opinion, or the Government can decide for one. That is fundamental, not only under our institutions of personal liberty and responsibility, but under the Christian ethic.

It is not true, for instance, in the Soviet Union. There, all those who have known or worked with a person who has been even charged with the offenses with which Mr. Hiss has been charged must flee from him as from the plague, if they would preserve even the safety of their lives. But that is not true of us; and, indeed, that difference between us and the Soviet Union goes to the very root of the issues which so deeply divide the free world from the Communist world.

Turning then to my personal attitude toward Mr. Hiss, I said that it would be founded upon the principles as stated by Christ in the passages which I cited from the Gospel according to St. Matthew. These passages represent the tradition in which I have been bred, going back beyond the limits of memory. Mr. Hiss is in the greatest trouble in which a man could be.

The outcome of his appeal can have little bearing upon his personal tragedy. The Court of Appeals can either affirm the conviction and sentence, in which case he must go to prison; or, if it finds error in the proceedings below, it can reverse the judgment of the court and remand the case for still another trial in conformity with its opinion.

It is in regard to a man in this situation that I referred to Christ's words setting forth compassion as the highest of Christian duties and as the highest quality in the sight of God.

If there is anything in what I have said which casts doubt upon the proceedings of a United States court, I fail to see it. And I do not believe that any fair mind, brought up in the principles which I have discussed, would differ from me. What I have said has nothing whatever to do with the decision of the jury or with the correctness of the rulings of the trial judge. It would be equally valid whether the conviction is affirmed or reversed.

FOURTH. Similarly, what I have said would not, I believe, carry to any fair mind the implication that I was condoning the offenses with which Mr. Hiss was charged and of which he has been convicted. It seems fantastic in the light of the facts of my life, which have been a matter of most public record, that any such insinuation should be made. Over the past 30 years I have repeatedly served the United States, and have done so almost continuously for the past 10 years.

No one can be found to say that I have not done this faithfully and to the best of my ability. Few can doubt that on all of these occasions there were far easier and more profitable courses open to me. So far as public avowals of loyalty are concerned, I have on numerous occasions taken the most solemn oath of allegiance and loyalty to my country and to its Constitution.

But for the benefit of those who would create doubt where none existed, I will accept the humiliation of stating what should be obvious that I did not and do not condone in any way the offenses charged, whether committed by a friend or by a total stranger, and that I would never knowingly tolerate any disloyal person in the Department of State.

criticism that his January 25 statement was a reflection on the jury or judge. He said that in his 30 years as a lawyer he had made it a strict principle never to comment on a case that was under trial.

Next he dealt with complaints that he should have kept silent about Hiss after the conviction. He couldn't have kept silent, he explained, since a year ago the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had asked him about his attitude toward Hiss as being relevant to his confirmation as Secretary.

Besides, he went on tensely, there were "personal reasons" for speaking out. "The counsels of discretion and cowardice are appealing," he told the committe, but the consequences of cowardly decisions last for a lifetime.

Contrast With Russia

In Soviet Russia, he declared, all those who have known or worked with an accused person "must flee from him as from the plague if they would preserve even the safety of their lives." In the United States that is not true, he said, and the difference goes to the very root of the difference between communism and freedom.

Alger Hiss is "in the greatest trouble in which a man can be," the Secretary said, regardless of the outcome of his appeal. He thought Christian compassion was the highest duty toward a man in such a position. And he ended his statement with an avowal of his own loyalty to his country.

He tossed his manuscript on the table with an air of finality and relief. The hearing ended after one or two more questions, and without any comment from committee members on what Acheson had said.

There were signs that his statement was not as spontaneous as it appeared. Leading Democratic senators had expressed disapproval of the Secretary's January 25 statement on Hiss, and Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), had written constituents that he thought the Secretary's stand had been a mistake.

Other Points At Hearing

The fact that Senator Hill, a Democrat, asked for yesterday's statement, and that Acheson had prepared it in advance, suggested that friendly Democratic Senators had persuaded him to make it.

Earlier in yesterday's hearing Acheson and Peurifoy had made the following points in answering questions:

1. On the basis of facts now known, the State Department would have regarded Alger Hiss as a poor security risk.

2. Since January 1, 1947, a total of 202 employes had been permitted to resign or leave through "reductions in force" after "someone said something" about their loyalty or trustworthiness. Of this number 91 were asked to resign for moral reasons, most of them homosexuals, who might have been easy targets for blackmail by foreign agents.

Lloyd 'Vigorously Extolled' Hiss Virtues, McCarthy Says

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) said yesterday that Alger Hiss probably would be back in the State Department if the decision were up to a White House aide, David Demarest Lloyd.

Lloyd

Lloyd is "Case No. 9" of the 81 persons McCarthy wants investigated in connection with his charges that there are or were many Communists in the State Department.

Hiss, a former State Department official, recently was convicted of perjury. He was accused of lying when he denied that he slipped secret papers to a Communist courier.

McCarthy, in a Senate speech last week, referred to Case No. 9 as a White House speech writer who he said once failed to get clearance from a State Department loyalty board. McCarthy said that both the aide and his wife were members of Communist-front organizations. He did not give any names.

Lloyd Monday night identified himself as Case No. 9, but he said he belongs to no Communist-front organizations.

McCarthy, in a statement yesterday, confirmed that Lloyd is the man in Case No. 9.

Noting that Lloyd was reported to have said he withdrew from certain organizations when he found he did not agree with their doctrines, McCarthy said:

"I am inclined to question the extent of Mr. Lloyd's 'reform,' however, in view of his subsequent actions. For example, he prepared a document entitled 'President Truman's Loyalty Program,' which was furnished to all of the White House ghost writers as background material.

"In this article he vigorously extolled the virtues of . . . Alger Hiss. From this article, which was written after Hiss was exposed, it appears that if this young man had his way, Hiss would be back in the State Department handling secret material and still helping to shape our foreign policy.

Army Streamlines Its General Staff

Planes First

U. S. Starts Arms Flow To Europe

By The Associated Press

The United States will start a billion-dollar flow of arms to western Europe next weekend when a French aircraft carrier arrives to pick up a cargo of American Navy fighters and bombers.

These initial supplies for France will set into motion the much-delayed American program for bolstering the Atlantic area against possible Russian aggression.

Top Government officials reported the first consignment for France probably will be about 50 Corsair fighters and Helldiver bombers from the Navy's reserve stocks.

The planes, of types used successfully against the Japanese in World War II, will be loaded aboard the French carrier Dixmude after she docks Saturday or Sunday at Norfolk, Va.

The Dixmude, a 14,500-ton escort carrier, was built at Chester, Pa., and later turned over to the French after it had been used by the British.

National Defense and State Department officials had tried to keep the carrier's impending arrival a secret, but it leaked out. There is some concern here over increasing demonstrations by Communists in France and Italy against American arms shipments.

Secretary Gordon Gray yesterday announced a streamlining of the Army General Staff which restores the classical "Gs" setup wth some modern additions.

In cutting the number of staff divisions from five to four, the Department of Army General Staff returns to ts prewar organization and conforms to the setup still prevailing in lower Army echelons.

Two divisions—Plans and Operations and Organization and Training—are merged in one unit, "G-3, Operations."

The heads of the four new staff divisions will be renamed in accordance with prewar practice. Instead of being called "Directors," they'll be called "Assistant Chiefs of Staff." The divisions will be titled: G-1, Personnel; G-2, Intelligence; G-3, Operations, and G-4, Logistics.

Superimposed over these divisions are three deputies. The Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans—formerly "Plans and Combat Operations"—supervises and reports to the Vice Chief of Staff on all planning activity throughout the staff. The Deputy Chief for Administration handles current happenings. And the Comptroller of the Army keeps track of and reports on the status of forces—in addition to keeping rein on the purse-strings.

Other changes:

1. Abolish the Special Services Division of the General Staff and transfer its functions to the Adjutant General and Quartermaster General. Special Services was set up during the war to assure that such morale-building activities as sports and entertainment of troops was pushed at a high level.

2. Merge the Troop Information Division and Public Information Division under the Office of the Chief of Information, and separate the Legislative Liaison Division from the latter office.

3. Remove the Office of the Chief of Finance from the Comptroller's Office and make it one of the Special Staff Divisions, increasing their number from six to seven. Finance, however, still remains under the Comptroller's supervision.

4. Transfer all procurement work now under the Office of the Chief of Transportation to other technical services.

Officials said it was found that there was considerable overlapping between the old divisions of Plans and Operations and Organization and Training. Jurisdiction over training largely is delegated to the Army Field Forces, with headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va.

Secretary Gray said the changes, which take effect today, result from the Army's continuing management improvement surveys. There will be some economies but they will not be substantial, he added.

Catholics Get Okay to Talk Church Union

Vatican City, Feb. 28 (AP).—Roman Catholics authorized by their bishops or the Holy See may attend church union congresses with non-Catholics, the Supreme Congregation of the Holy Office made known today.

In instructions to Catholic bishops throughout the world, however, the Holy Office gave two chief directives:

1. That these meetings, which it described as "desired occasions," be used to spread Catholic doctrine among non-Catholics.

2. Catholics must be careful to safeguard their own faith.

The Holy Office, one of 11 congregations that govern the catholic church, said it issued these instructions at this time because of the increase in various countries of ecumenical movements in which Catholics and Protestants have had close contact.

It reminded Catholics of the "constant desire . . . of the Church that all believers in Christ return to unity" (within the Catholic church).

Only priests who have proved themselves capable in such matters should be sent to discussions between Catholic and non-Catholic theologians, the instructions said.

Kent succeeds Robert G. Nixon, International News Service.

3 Railroads Now Guarding Against Derailment Plot

New York, Feb. 28 (NYHT).—Two more New Jersey railroads joined the Lackawanna Railroad today in guarding against derailment attempts. The railroads said police and FBI agents have intensified a search for possible saboteurs.

The two new railroads to begin special track patrols are the New York, Susquehanna & Western and the Lehigh Valley. Lackawanna officials reported two derailment attempts February 17 and February 21. It now runs pilot engines before night passenger trains.

Police theorize that disgruntled former employes of the Lackawanna are to blame.

Long-Range Study For World Rule Urged by Attorney

A long-range study among the nations to determine common grounds for the establishment of a world government was advocated yesterday by Washington Attorney Philip Amram.

In an address to the junior bar section of the District Bar Association at the Annapolis Hotel, Amram said international law is not effective because it has no provisions for enforcement.

A member of the national executive council of United World Federalists, Amram added that even the International Court has no jurisdiction over nations unless they give their consent.

MISSION TO MOVE OUT—Movers carry a desk from the Bulgarian Legation, 2132 Bancroft pl. nw., closed yesterday in obedience to State Department orders to leave as soon as possible after the break in diplomatic relations with the Russian Balkan satellite. Attaches called police to drive newsmen and photographers away, declaring the publicity was a violation of their "constitutional rights." Police let them remain when they found the reporters and cameramen were staying on the sidewalk and not trespassing on legation grounds. Earlier, the fire department arrived to extinguish a blaze in a rug, which caught fire as official papers were being burned in an areaway

U. S. Aide Is Quoted as Saying Point 4 Aims at Colonial Revolt

By The Associated Press

A Detroit businessman yesterday quoted a State Department official as saying President Truman's Point Four program is aimed ultimately at creating revolt among colonial peoples.

Roy W. Gifford, retired chairman of the board of Borg-Warner International Corp., attributed the statement to Benjamin Gerig, chief of the State Department's Office of Dependent Areas Affairs and deputy United States representative on the United Nations Trusteeship Council.

"This man," Gifford told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "said the object of the Point Four program is to develop the colonial backward areas of the world until they can revolt against their mother countries."

Gerig in Geneva

In Geneva, Switzerland, where he is attending a United Nations meeting, Gerig said there was "no truth whatever" in Gifford's assertion.

Gerig said the statement Gifford referred to was one in which he (Gerig) paraphrased a quotation of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Gerig said he had quoted Hull to the effect that "people who aspire to independence and have the capacity to obtain it merit the sympathy and support of other peoples."

"Mr. Gifford interpreted this in a wholly unwarranted manner," Gerig said. "I did not mention revolt at any time."

President Truman has asked Congress to approve a Point Four project involving governmental technical assistance and private financing to develop the economy of backward world areas. It is part of the drive to check Communism.

Gifford said Gerig's remark was made last June at a foreign affairs seminar sponsored by the Brookings Institution at Lake Forest College, near Chicago.

Gifford was one of several witnesses before the Senate group and the House Foreign Affairs Committee at separate hearings on the Administration's request for $2,950,000,000 in new money for the Economic Cooperation Administration's foreign aid program for the year beginning July 1.

Britain came under attack at both hearings. The ECA was attacked and defended.

Criticizes British Action

Representative Richards (D., S. C.), a member of the House committee, criticized Britain for allegedly failing to "give and take" in the world struggle for economic recovery.

He said he did not believe Britain was following a sufficiently flexible dollar policy in world trade with the Dominion sterling areas.

"If there's going to be economic recovery," he said, "Britain has to give and take in these areas. The empire is gone and she might as well recognize it. She might just as well put her name in the pot and fight for the things we are fighting for instead of just the British Commonwealth."

W. John Kenney, chief of the E.C.A. mission to the United Kingdom, told the House group he thought "uncooperative" was the wrong word to describe Britain's attitude toward European economic union. He said financial problems plus the fact an election was coming up brought a sense of caution to Brtiish officials. I would rather describe Britain's attitude as that than as uncooperative."

'Mo' Captain Takes Blame For Grounding

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The captain shared the fate of his ship today in the best naval tradition.

Squaring his shoulders before a naval court of inquiry, Capt. William D. Brown, 47, assumed full blame for running the mighty battleship Missouri onto a Hampton Roads shoal January 17.

Some bitterness crept into Brown's dramatic statement. But he asked that three fellow officers and defendants be dealt with lightly and that his own "ordeal" be made a Navy object lesson.

"I and I alone bear the sole responsibility for the grounding of the Missouri," Brown said. "As captain of the ship, it was my duty to keep her safe and secure. I didn't do it . . . I could have, and should have kept the ship in deep water."

Brown's counsel did not agree with his assumption of full blame.

In a closing plea for the ill-starred skipper, Capt. C. C. Wood, himself commanding officer of the cruiser Albany, contended that Brown could have kept the Missouri on a safe course despite its bad situation in the shoals.

"What he wasn't able to do was to deal successfully with a devastating combination of adverse circumstances and personal failures on the part of many," Wood said.

The court of inquiry adjourned this afternoon and began studying 2000 pages of testimony from which it will fix the blame for the Missouri's grounding.

Dr. Fuchs Decides To Plead Guilty Today, Is Report

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Dr. Klaus Fuchs, foremost spy of the atomic age, has decided to plead guilty when he goes on trial tomorrow charged with giving A-bomb and H-bomb secrets to Russia, well-informed sources said tonight.

Unless there is a last-hour change in plan, it is understood that the defense will seek to minimize the importance of the information Fuchs has confessed to giving Russia while he was Britain's trusted third-ranking nuclear research scientist.

Denfeld Given Salute, Leaving Boston Base

Boston, Feb. 28 (AP).—A 17-gun salute was fired and a band played "Auld Lang Syne" as Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, former chief of naval operations, left the Boston Naval Base today for the last time as a Navy officer.

Denfeld was replaced by Admiral Forrest P. Sherman during the recent row over unification of the armed services.

His retirement tomorrow will bring to an end a Navy career of nearly 38 years.

Kilgore Opens Debate on DP Law Revision

NYHT News Service

The present displaced persons law was branded in the Senate yesterday as "flagrantly discriminatory" and "unworkable" by Senator Harley M. Kilgore, (D., W. Va.), sponsor of a bi-partisan measure to liberalize the act.

Kilgore clashed directly with Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), who bitterly criticized the DP program but insisted that the present law does not discriminate against Jews, Catholics or any other group.

McCarran, in a 3¼-hour speech opening debate on the DP issue, charged that Soviet agents and potential subversives had reportedly entered the United States under the guise of displaced persons. He declared that administration of the law by the displaced persons commission rather than the law itself was to blame.

Kilgore responded that such charges against the commission were "unsubstantiated" and "frequently foolish."

McCarran cited in great detail reports that the commission had blocked adequate screening of displaced persons and overlooked fraud and perjury by refugees seeking admission to this country under the DP program. He credited un-named officials or secret reports for most of these charges.

Members of the commission, who said they had sought in vain a chance to answer such complaints before the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Senator McCarran is chairman, listened to yesterday's debate from the Senate Gallery.

Kilgore warned that a series of amendments to the present law proposed by McCarran would not remove its discriminatory provisions and only make the law more difficult to administer.

McCarran, who conceded that his proposals were aimed primarily to add more restrictions to the DP law, won approval of the Judiciary Committee for his amendments a month ago although a majority of the committee members have since called for liberalization rather than tightening of the law.

Senator Kilgore charged that the present law was discriminatory on its face, regardless of the intentions of its authors. He cited its December 22, 1945, cut-off date and its quota restrictions based upon national origin and requiring that 30 percent be farmers.

Amendments to the present law proposed by Senator Kilgore and 17 other senators of both parties are patterned after the liberalized bill approved by the House last year. They would extend the life of the program for one year and increase from 205,000 to 339,000 the number to be admitted.

Senator Kilgore told the Senate these amendments had the support of leaders of all faiths, of voluntary agencies which cooperate in the program, of organized labor and many other groups.

Chiang Will Take Over Today

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 28 (AP).—Chiang Kai shek today announced he will resume Wednesday the presidency of what is left of Nationalist China, a job he quit 13 months ago.

Acting President Li Tsung jen is still in New York recuperating from a stomach operation.

[In New York Li's adviser, Dr. Kan Chieh hou, told the United Press Li had no intenton of resigning and that Chiang could not resume the presidency because he became a private citizen when he resigned.—Editor's Note.]

Chiang said he had decided to return because "the world situation has changed for the worse," especially since the Chinese Communists signed their treaty of alliance with Russia. He noted the Nationalists have been without a president since Li left about four months ago.

While the constitutionality of Chiang's move is questionable, all quarters predicted everything will pass off smoothly. Chiang actually has been running the show since Li left last November.

One of Chiang's first acts probably will be to accept the resignation of Premier Yen Hsi-shan. Yen is old and wants to quit. His likely successor is Gen. Chen Cheng, commander in the southeast including Formosa. For 20 years he has been one of Chiang's closest friends.

(Gen. Chu Teh, commander of all Chinese Communist armies, declared in a speech in Peiping that the invasion of Formosa was "not far off." He declared intensive training of a "mighty military force" was under way.)

Czechs Told Of Internal Titoist Threat

Prague, Feb. 28 (AP).—The possibility of an imminent wholesale purge of the Czech Communist Party and subsequent trial of some members on the charges of Titoism loomed on Czechoslovakia's political horizon tonight.

The first step toward such actions were taken Friday at a meeting of the party's ruling Central Committee.

The official news agency disclosed today the members of the committee heard and approved:

1. A speech by President Klement Gottwald admitting that Titoism (the independent Communism typified by Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito) has appeared in the party's ranks.

2. A report recommending that Vilem Novy, Communist former member of Parliament and former editor of Rude Pravo, the party's official mouthpiece, be expelled from the party and the Central Committee.

At the same time the Official Gazette said two other members of Parliament had resigned and a third was ousted by parliamentary decree. No reason was given.

The Gazette said the first two were Dr. Josef Bruah, a member of the Slovak Freedom Party, and Jan Lorkoa, member of the Slovak Communist Party.

The third deputy was identified as Ondrej Roba, another member of the Slovak Communist Party.

Other developments on the Czech scene:

1. The Nation's Roman Catholic Bishops warned their priests that the priests would be excommunicated if they accepted Government nominations for church offices without prior permission of their church superiors.

2. Two more American Mormon missionaries were given 48 hours to leave the country. The expulsion reduced to one the number of American Mormon missionaries still in Czechoslovakia.

The expelled missionaries will leave Thursday. They are Melvin P. Mabey, Bountiful Utah, and William Martini, Glendale, Calif.

Gen. Herren Takes Command Of Military District Today

U. S. Army Photo
GEN. THOMAS W. HERREN
New 'CO' of MDW

Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, chief of Army Special Services, will take command of the Military District of Washington today.

He succeeds Col. John T. Cole, who has been MDW commander since the transfer of Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay last August. Colonel Cole is currently assigned to temporary duty in Guatemala.

A combat veteran of both World Wars, General Herren was born in Dadeville, Ala. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery Reserve upon graduation from the University of Alabama in 1917.

Later that year, General Herren transferred to the Cavalry in the Regular Army.

He served in France in 1918 with the 78th Field Artillery. Early in World War II, he commanded the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kans., and later went into combat in the European Theater as assistant commander of the 70th Infantry Division.

Before taking command of Army Special Services last August, General Herren was assistant commander of the First Cavalry Division in the Far East.

Russia Hikes Ruble's Value, Cuts Prices

Moscow, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Soviet Union boosted the official value of the ruble tonight in terms of the dollar, and switched from the dollar to gold as its monetary yardstick.

The ruble was declared worth 25 cents, compared to the old rate of a little less than 19 cents. At the same time, sweeping price reductions to th Soviet consumer were ordered.

The decree of the Council of Ministers marked another step in what apparently is an effort to establish the Soviet currency as an international competitor of the dollar and British pound. This idea appears to have dominated Russian financial policy since December 1947.

Four Price-Cut Decree

A statement from the Council of Ministers said that, effective Wednesday, the value of the ruble in foreign exchange will be calculated according to "the more stable gold standard."

Since July, 1937, the ruble's value has been calculated in terms of the dollar. This did not mean, however, that Russia is going on a true gold standard. There was no indication the ruble would be freely convertible into gold internally.

By the "currency reform" of December 14, 1947, Russia called in all her old rubles and exchanged them at the cash window at a rate of 10 rubles for one new one in order to head off inflation. At the same time rationing was ended and price reductions ordered.

A second price slash of 10 to 20 per cent on a large variety of goods was ordered April 9, 1948. A third price slash of 10 to 30 percent on 45 major clasifications of goods was ordered February 28, 1949.

The new decree cuts prices from 8 to 50 percent on a large number of consumer goods.

Dollar Worth 4 Rubles

In accordance with the claim to greater stability and value for the ruble, the ministers ordered the gold content of the ruble fixed at 0.222168 grams of fine gold.

McCloy Asks All-Germany Free Election

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 28 (AP). The United States issued an implicit challenge to Soviet Russia today by proposing free elections for all Germany, including the Communist-run east zone People's Republic.

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy advanced the proposal at a news conference. He expanded upon an indirect invitation he issued to the Russians January 3 to make "a bona fide offer" for uniting Germany. That invitation was ignored.

The Russians have been backing their Communist-ruled east German "National Front" as the only real advocates of German unity.

The new move apparently has full State Department support. McCloy indicated it will be discussed when he visits Washington at the end of this week.

McCloy suggested the United States would not take the initiative, but that Dr. Konrad Adenauer's west German government should consider discussing it with the eastern regime.

Adenauer so far has avoided all contact with the Communists of the east.

The proviso that the elections should be "free" pinpoints a fundamental difference between Russia and the west. They have disagreed at every postwar conference on what constitutes a free election.

The proposal, however, should put the Russians on the defensive in German eyes, since they have been clamoring for German unity and a government for "all of Germany."

Senate's Showdown On FEPC Is Delayed

Postponement of a Senate FEPC showdown until April was indicated last night as Senate Democratic leaders programmed three more measures ahead of it.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said the program shifts were largely of an "emergency" nature, and not prompted by a desire to delay FEPC.

Republican Senators, who now believe the Senate will vote cloture on the House-passed voluntary FEPC, promptly needled for earlier action.

"Why not call it up now," said Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.).

The fair employment practices legislation was originally scheduled to follow Senate action on the now pending displaced persons bill and the natural gas bill. That would have brought it before the Senate around March 10.

Following yesterday's meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy committee, Lucas said the omnibus flood control bill, the urgent deficiency appropriation bill and possibly middle income housing legislation will be called up ahead of FEPC.

He conceded FEPC may go over until April unless the Senate acts speedily on the previously booked measures.

Accounting Revision Fought

Administration witnesses yesterday opposed a provision in pending legislation which would establish an "Accountant General" within the Treasury having supervision over other Government departments.

Representatives of the Departments of Defense and Treasury appeared before a Senate committee considering the bill. It would carry out recommendations of the Hoover Reorganization Commission to revamp Federal accounting and budget practices.

Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNeil urged that the proposal to create an over-all Comptroller or "Accountant General" for the executive departments be "deferred for three to five years" to see if present cooperative efforts do not work. He and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, who also testified, backed the general features of the bill, however, and explained the operation of a somewhat similar system already in effect at the Pentagon.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward F. Bartelt took a similar stand. He presented a letter from Treasury Secretary Snyder along this line.

Johnson praised the operation of the "performance budget" put into effect for the military services last year. He said it was saving "millions" by showing the "true cost" of many operations and thus enabling sound cuts to be made. The pending bill would set up such a budget for all of the Government.

More Land Seized

Rome, Feb. 28 (AP).—Dispatches from southern Italy reported today that land-hungry Italian peasants are on the march again. The reports said thousands of Calabrian peasants occupied 50,000 acres of land in the past two days.

Security Pay Tops 3.5 Billions

By the United Press

Needy, old and jobless Americans collected $3,529,730,000 from Federal, State and local governments during the 12 months ended last June 30, the Social Security Administration reported yesterday.

Of this, the Federal Government put up $1,721,000,000, or nearly 50 per cent, Administrator Arthur J. Altmeyer said in his annual report for the last fiscal year.

He again appealed for a broader Social Security system, including wider coverage, higher benefits and aid for the disabled.

The report also showed that:

1. Uncle Sam paid out $627,000,000 directly during fiscal 1949 in Old Age and Survivors' Insurance. As of last June 30, 2,554,200 persons were drawing such benefits.

2. Joint Federal-State jobless payments reached $1,193,000,000, as compared with $753,000,000 the previous year, when there was less unemployment. Altogether, 5,644,975 persons drew jobless pay in fiscal 1949, as compared with 3,820,774 the 12 months before. The average weekly payment in 1949 was $19.91, as against $18.19 in 1948.

3. Federal-State relief to needy aged, blind persons and dependent children reached $1,710,000,000 in 1949, an increase of $316,000,000 over the previous year. These benefits went to 4,062,505 persons.

Butter Dumping Is Expected Next In Price Prop Plan

The Government soon may start giving surplus butter to needy Americans or "dumping" it abroad at bargain basement prices.

Agriculture Department officials said they see little prospect of getting rid of the Government's present 86-million-pound butter stock before it is necessary to step into this year's market to bolster dairy prices. The butter now on hand was purchased last year.

Law to Curb Sex Crimes Here Sought

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new District law requiring stiff prison terms for habitual criminals probably will be recommended by the Special House Committee investigating Washington crime and law enforcement.

The idea was suggested yesterday during the second round of hearings on sex crimes in Washington. James C. Davis (D., Ga.), committee chairman, said later he hopes the "habitual criminal law" will be one of the results of the inquiry. Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) a committee member, also voiced support of the proposal.

The suggestion for a new law was advanced as one possible way to make Washington safer from sex criminals. The committee head that perverts now can forfeit $25 collateral when arrested, without even showing up in court. This system "gives no protection to the citizens of the District," Joseph N. Sanford, Municipal Court probation officer told the committee.

"I'd like to see the system changed to make sure they (sex deviates) are brought before the court so that stiff sentences can be imposed where they are indicated," Sanford said.

He said, too, that the proposed "habitual criminal statute," first suggested in a question by Hyman I. Fischbach, committee counsel, would be most helpful to the District.

They Stay Out of Jail

For indecent exposure, Sanford said, District law now provides a maximum penalty of $250 fine or 90 days in jail. The court cannot impose both, he said, so that sex perverts with sufficient funds can continually stay out of jail.

The proposed "habitual criminal law" would apply not only to sex crimes, but to all other "predatory" felonies and misdemeanors, it was explained. It would not cover such minor matters as traffic offenses. It would take a trial by jury to convict a person as an habitual criminal.

A minimum jail term of three years is being considered for persons convicted as habitual criminals, it was learned. The law would be unlike New York's Baumes law, it was said. The New York statute, nicknamed the "four-time-loser" law, fixes a life prison term for the fourth felony conviction. For some offenses the courts are empowered to waive application of the Baumes law.

Representative Davis said that "many States have habitual criminal laws in one form or another, and they perform a very good function in keeping down crime."

Sex Crime Proposals

Among other proposals for strengthening the District system of dealing with sex crimes advanced in testimony by Sanford and by Edward W. Garrett, probation officer for District Court, were these:

1. Assignment of a psychologist for presentencing advice, and a psychiatrist for postsentencing treatment, to the District Court probation officer. Assignment of similar personnel to work with the Municipal Court probation office.

2. Increased staff and more room (the latter being provided by the new Federal Courts building) for the District Court probation setup.

3. Compulsory examination of persons convicted of serious sex crimes by psychiatrists under the provisions of the Miller Law of 1948 for treating sex psychopaths. Sanford said this should be done before sentences are imposed, but he agreed with Fischbach that in any event it should be done before persons convicted of rape or similar offenses are placed on parole or otherwise returned to society.

Mental Examination

Sanford said that persons convicted of serious sex offenses should be given mental examinations to determine their condition. If they are of sound mind, they should be sentenced to jail, he said. If there is mental illness, that should be treated, so the person would not be returned to society later with the same condition that caused him to commit a crime.

Chief feature of the Miller law is the provision for sex psychopaths to be committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital for an indefinite time, at least until the medical decision is made that such an individual has been cured.

Several Cases Cited

Sanford outlined several cases in which the Miller law had been used to commit sex offenders to St. Elizabeths, and in two cases, he said, operation of the law turned up psychotic persons who were committed to St. Elizabeths as being of unsound mind.

Garrett said it was "indisputable" that the community saves money by having an efficient probation system. He said there were about 880 persons under supervision of his office as of January 3. The cost of the probation setup is minute, he said, compared with the cost of maintaining 880 persons in jail.

Fischbach, in questions to Garrett, indicated strong dissatisfaction with the present system, which permits persons charged with offenses for which probation is not permitted to plead guilty to lesser offenses in which probation is allowed.

The hearing may be resumed at 2 p. m. today for testimony on operations of the District Coroner's office.

Un-American Probers Depart for Hawaii

Two investigators for the House Un-American Activities Committee left for Hawaii last night to prepare for public hearings on Communist activity there.

They are Courtney E. Owens and William A. Wheeler.

The committee is scheduled to open hearings in Hawaii April 12.

of four years on the force refresher training, 7½ hours a day for two months. It was discontinued because of the shortage of police officers and the need to keep uniformed men on the street. If present vacancies are filled fast enough, Storm said, it is hoped that the academy can be reopened July 1. Lack of the academy has hampered police efficiency, he said. "Only six or eight" police department officials have attended the FBI training school here in Washington since the demise of the academy, he said, and no "cops" have attended.

3. Increase the period of basic training from the present six weeks to three months specified in the police manual. The period was cut, he said, again because of the shortage of police officers, and the recognized need to get uniformed recruits on the street. "Six weeks is not enough," Storm stated, "and no one knows that better than we do, and the community must suffer."

4. Get out of the business of collecting money from persons ordered by a court to contribute to the support of their wives and children. At present these funds are paid by husbands and fathers at police precincts, and the money is then taken by police officers to the proper court. This practice, "established by act of Congress many years ago," according to Storm, is an unnecessary responsibility.

5. Deputize a considerable number of policemen as marshals. At present, Storm said, policemen lose custody of a prisoner as soon as he is arraigned, because the law specifies that after arraignment prisoners be handed over to deputy U. S. marshals. If police officers, as deputy marshals, could keep custody of an arrested man, it would be of great help in the solution of crime, Storm said. He was echoed by Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives.

6. Enact legislation which would make monthly conferences mandatory among all Washington law enforcement officials. The lack of integration now has been clearly shown at these hearings, Storm testified. "I do not favor a voluntary conference. Law enforcement and the community would benefit by compulsory conferences" to eliminate the lack of integration," he said.

7. Give the Police Academy more money. At present, Storm testified, the academy gets $2500 a year, with which it will have to pay for books and expenses of instructions.

8. Give the police department more cops. "If we had more policemen, a lot of these inadequacies would solve themselves," he said.

Export Privileges Are Suspended

The Commerce Department suspended the export license privileges of Siegel Chemical Co., Inc., of New York yesterday, accusing the firm of trying to make an illegal shipment of strategic chemicals to an iron curtain country.

The department also suspended license privileges of Berwin Trading Co., Inc., of Brooklyn, for allegedly submitting "fictitious orders" for steel wire and cable from South African "clients."

TRUCK TAXES HELP BUILD 'EM ALL!

In 1948, the total construction cost of all the highways, roads and streets built throughout America was $1,531,000,000.

In 1948, the trucks paid—in special highway-use taxes, including Federal Excise taxes—more than $1,089,000,000.

You need no slide rule to discover that truck taxes alone amount to more than two-thirds of the Nation's total highway construction-cost bill.

Nor do you need to be told what truck taxes mean to you.

Today, and for years past, hundreds of thousands of trucks and tractor-trailer combinations are taxed all the way from $1,000 to $3,000 and more EACH, PER YEAR, in special "highway-use taxes" for the right to run over the roads.

What's more, some of the large express highways these truck taxes help build and maintain are actually forbidden to truck traffic. Also, hundreds of thousands of miles of country roads are virtually never used by commercial trucks; are used by farm trucks primarily.

So bear in mind, that in addition to paying for the roads they use to bring you everything you eat, buy, use or wear—the trucks also help pay for the roads, streets and highways which the motoring public uses almost exclusively.

HOW TRUCK TAXES HELP MAINTAIN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA'S ROADS AND STREETS

With much of our highway pattern laid out, we have entered a period where maintenance and renewal of the District of Columbia's roads and streets is assuming major importance.

Truck taxes in the District play a major role in paying for road and street maintenance. In 1948, the District spent $1,337,000 for repair and renewal of its roads and streets, according to figures from the District Government. In the same year truck taxes totaled $2,639,000 or 197 per cent of this entire cost.

And, bear in mind that the greatest volume of most highly taxed truck traffic runs over only a small fraction of the total District of Columbia road and street mileage.

Battle Plans Boost In State Coal Stock

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 28.—Governor Battle conferred with representatives of a dozen Virginia coal producers today and laid plans which he said will "very materially increase the supply of household coal" in the State.

Just what is contemplated to relieve an acute shortage, the Governor would not say. But he promised "something definite in a very short time."

Under a law enacted at the current session of the General Assembly, Battle has authority to seize and operate coal mines in an "emergency." He has issued a formal declaration of emergency and has ordered continuance of the Virginia Fuel Commission.

There was an indication after his conference that the State is considering the possibility of operating deep mines, left idle by the strike of 15,000 union miners. At present, the State employs diggers in one strip mine in Buchanan County.

Since almost all of the State's strip mines are nonunion and therefore still in operation, any appreciable increase in supply would probably come from deep mines.

Battle has said it is unlikely the State could undertake production in deep mines because of a shortage of skilled labor.

Battle has said that he, the fuel commission and operators "are working on some plan which we believe will very materially increase the supply of household coal."

They are now at such a stage, Battle added, that "it would be harmful if any detailed publicity were given them at this time."

Seizure Considered

Asked if further seizure were in the offing, Battle replied: "We discussed the entire coal situation, in which the possibility of seizure was certainly an element."

He told reporters Monday that any extension of State seizure would be based on the assurance that enough miners, willing to work, would be on hand to dig in deep mines.

The six representatives of mine operators who conferred with Battle at his invitation today asked that their names be withheld, and the Governor's office complied.

Battle said he felt it would be a "catastrophe" if any publicity, "which we might consider perfectly harmless," were given to the session for fear it would "throw a wrench into our plans."

Sorry for Mistake

Moscow, Feb. 28. (AP)—Politburo Member Andrei Andreyev publicly acknowledged today that he had made a mistake in advocating a team form of organization in collective farming and fully accepted criticisms by Pravada February 19.

A Dirty Dig

Coal Stolen From Man's Garage Here

If the coal strike continues, the theft of coal might become a capital offense.

Thomas Williams would settle for nothing less than slow death for whoever stole two tons of hard coal from a garage in the rear of his home at 416 Rhode Island ave. nw.

The lock on the garage door had been ripped open. Only two scuttles of coal remained. Williams told police the two tons of coal for which he paid $40.60 had been delivered Saturday.

"It must have been some one I know," Williams said bitterly. "My dog, Spot, was in the backyard all weekend, and he would have barked if it had been a stranger."

Misfortune on a smaller scale befell Mrs. Emma Jones, of 1125 3d st. sw. Two bushel baskets of pea coal were delivered to her home yesterday afternoon.

She left the baskets on the sidewalk in front of the house for a few minutes while she went into the house. When she returned for the coal, it was gone.

Burn Found Guilty of Manslaughter

George R. Burn, 32, an oil burner repairman, was convicted yesterday in District Court of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of Harry M. Mauz, 47, of 59 I st. nw.

Burn had been indicted for first-degree murder in the case but the jury returned the lesser verdict after almost three hours of deliberation. Maximum manslaughter penalty is 5 to 15 years.

Burn and Maux resided in different parts of the same house and had been friends. According to testimony, both had been drinking and arguing.

Burn testified that he accosted Mauz while turning on the hot-water heater in the basement of the residence. Burn admitted that he was dressed in his shorts and wore a .38 calber revolver in a holster strapped about his wast.

It was Burn's testimony that he and Mauz began scuffling over the gun and that it discharged accidentally.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff said that he believed the manslaughter verdict just. Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin had agreed to submit such a plea on behalf of his client the day before but the offer was rejected by the United States Attorney's office.

Leach Convicted Of 2d Degree Murder

John Leach, 63, of 629 New Jersey ave. nw., yesterday was convicted of second-degree murder after 40 minutes deliberation by a District Court jury.

Leach was charged with slaying a woman friend, Carrie Means, 39, with a .38 caliber pistol at the latter's home, 1702 10th st. nw., last October 31. The pair had argued over the woman's renting a room to another man.

earlier strike returned to the pits when Lewis instructed them to do so.

Most of the documents offered in support of the Government's theme were objected to by the union's chief counsel, Welly K. Hopkins, who was sustained by Judge Richmond B. Keech, on the ground that the evidence was "immaterial."

"The sole issue before me," declared Judge Keech, "is whether or not there has been compliance with the order of this court. The state of coal—horrible as it may be—is not the instant issue before me.

Later, at a bench conference, the jurist said he might reconsider acceptance of the documents as material evidence. Most of the documents dealt with comparative production, consumption and stockpile figures of 1946 and 1948.

The day's court session came to an early halt yesterday afternoon when the Government issued a subpena for a letter written by Lewis on December 7, 1946 ordering the men back to the mines. The Government will contend that this letter contains a much stronger and vigorous back-to-work order than two messages sent out by Lewis since the present strike was ordered ended by the court on February 11.

Evidence Complete Today

The Government expects to end its case in half an hour after the trial resumes at 9:30 this morning in District Court. The union anticipates completing its defense before the day is over.

Dr. W. H. Young, of the Bureau of Mines, testified yesterday that as of last Saturday—February 25—the Nation's over-all coal stocks were down to an estimated 7,800,000 tons, or 5.6 days' supply for ordinary winter needs and consumption. These figures indicate that by Saturday the country would be—statistically and theoretically—completely out of coal. However, the situation is not as terrible as the statistics indicate, because consumption has been drastically reduced around the country to meet the shortage emergency.

In attempting to bring into the evidence the two past convictions of the union for failure to carry out a court antistrike injunction, Government counsel argued that the records show:

"A consistent pattern and policy by the union to defy the injunctive orders by this court . . . whenever the unions deems that such defiance will promote its immediate interest in a labor dispute."

The union contends that it has tried to call the men back to work, in conformity with the court's order, but that the men, independently and of their own volition, refuse to return to the pits without a new work contract.

Resumption of the coal negotiations, by agreement of the disputants, was arranged yesterday after a one-day suspension. The fact that John L. Lewis and George Love, the chief opposing negotiators, will be back in the city today served to insure a little hope, or at least some wishful thinking. Lewis has been in Illinois for a funeral of a brother; Love was in Pittsburgh, ostensibly for a board meeting of his company, Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., largest in the world.

Giant FOOD DEPARTMENT STORES

Don't get the impression that eggs graded U. S. Government "A" are necessarily fresh. Even storage eggs, if they meet certain specifications, will carry U. S. Government Grade "A".
GIANT feels the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles eggs only from nearby farms, thus making it possible to bring the eggs to you in their freshest condition.
The egg's quality depends on the breed, environment, and proper scientific feeding of the chicken. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to egg production.
There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there, and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain, bran) and other fattening ingredients including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's only eggs of this latter kind of chicken which Giant features in its 20 stores.

South Bend Council Rejects $11,000,000 Housing Offer

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 28 (AP).—South Bend apparently has rejected 11 million dollars in Federal funds to build a low-cost housing project.

The City Council, in a stormy session last night that drew more than 4000 residents, split along Democratic and Republican lines as a proposal to accept the grant failed to pass.

The huge Federal allotment apparently will go to another city.

Hundreds of petitions were presented, but a final vote resulted in a 4-4 tie which, in effect, killed the proposal. Four Republican councilmen voted against the proposal and four Democratic members of the council approved.

The council has one vacancy and the mayor, a Democrat, cannot vote. William E. Voor, attorney for the Federal Public Housing Authority, said it was his opinion that the 1023-dwelling unit was dead.

Twenty-two organizations, including Catholic, Jewish and Protestant religious organizations, CIO and AFL unions and some veterans' groups, appeared in favor of the project. It was opposed by 11 other groups, including the Association of Commerce, real estate and insurance firms, building material dealers and the St. Joseph County Medical Society.

Supporters of the measure contended that private industry has failed to provide low-cost housing. Opponents charged that the Federal grant was a move toward socialism.

U. S. Spending Lashed Again

With "Economy in Government" its theme, the National Small Business Men's Association yesterday opened a three-day meeting in the Statler Hotel.

The more than 500 businessmen attending were warned early in the meeting that the country is "so far down the road to national socialism" that a few more months down the same road "will definitely take us past the point of no return."

President DeWitt Emery, who issued the warning, said approval of President Truman's proposed 42.4 billion-dollar budget would remove "all hope of our Federal Government adopting sound fiscal policies."

Paring the budget down to 36 billion, a suggestion he attributed to Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), would "stop the big spenders in their tracks," he said.

The members spent most of the afternoon in a closed session thrashing out resolutions which will form the association's program for the next year.

The resolutions adopted will also be part of the "legislative recommendations" to be offered to Congress on Thursday which has been designated "Small Business Day."

At a luncheon in the Statler at 12:30 p. m. today, Senator Byrd is scheduled to address the association on "America's March to Socialism."

At 9:30 this morning, Association General Counsel J. Raymond Tiffany will preside at a panel discussion on taxes.

The panel will include Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.), both of the Senate Fiance Committee; Representative Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Noah M. Mason (R., Ill.), a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

54 Air Force Evictions Put Off

Fifty-four families of Air Force officers, scheduled to be evicted from their Arlington Farms quarters yesterday, have been granted a temporary reprieve.

Military District of Washington spokesman revealed the families have been permitted to remain at the project until July 31. This was the result of an agreement under which the Air Force will share part of the operating expense of the Army-operated development.

After a separate Air Force was formed, according to MDW, the Army expected the Air Force to help foot the bills. It got nowhere with its requests for financial support of the housing project, however, until eviction notices went to the Air Force personnel.

The eviction orders would not have affected Air Force enlisted men living at the Arlington Farms project.

County Letter Signers Challenged

The Washington Post
MRS. REUBEN BOGDANOFF
Her petition challenged

The validity of signatures on a letter demanding an immediate survey of county government sent to the Prince Georges County Commissioners two weeks ago was questioned yesterday.

Mrs. Bernard L. Teelyea of 4012 35th st., Mount Rainier, corresponding secretary of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Prince Georges County, appeared before the meeting of the commissioners to state that the name of Mrs. Frank M. Stephen, president of the Federation, was signed to the letter by someone else.

Mrs. Teelyea said Mrs. Stephen did not know her name was signed to the letter until Monday when she was shown a photostatic copy.

The letter was originally presented by Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president of the League of Women Voters, and Walter F. Mulligan, president of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation.

Mulligan, who was present yesterday, said no fraud was intended but admitted that he, Mrs. Muriel Stelzer, president of the College Park branch of the American Association of University Women, and Mrs. Bogdanoff signed several of the names.

The persons whose names were signed all were in agreement with the original request for a survey in January, 1949, he said.

The trio made five or six attempts to reach Mrs. Stephen but were unable to contact her, Mulligan said.

Mulligan said he personally signed the name of Joseph H. Blanford of TB, Md., former master of the Pomona Grange for the county.

Blanford said last night that he did not sign the letter and did not know of it, but that at the time of the original petition he favored a survey of county government. The Pomona Grange adopted a resolution favoring it, he said.

He no longer is Master of the Grange, he said, anad has not been keeping up with recent events. Blanford declared he has no objection to the Sothoron bill and believes it is a step in the right direction. He said he did not want to become embroiled in the controversy.

Mrs. Teelyea told the commissioners they should require Mrs. Bogdanoff to bring along the signers when she presents a petition.

"That is the only way you can stop that woman," she stated. "I challenge every signature she brings before you."

Mrs. Teelyea said she informed Mrs. Bogdanoff that the executive board, and not the Federation of Women's Clubs, adopted the resolution. Only a meeting of the full club membership can go on record for the federation and this has not been done, she said.

Mrs. Stephen, reached by telephone, said she had not signed the letter, but still favors the survey. However, she, too, pointed out that it was the executive board which had adopted the original resolution in January, 1949.

She said she believed the addition of her signature to the letter was an error on the part of Mrs. Bogdanoff and Mulligan, that they had intended merely showing that she was president of her organization.

Mrs. Bogdanoff said the second petition was merely a letter to remind the Commissioners of the orgiginal request made in January, 1949, and seeking prompt action before the public hearing on the Sothoron bill at Annapolis.

She said she merely put down the names of those who had signed the original petition. She reached all who had signed it by telephone, she added.

The Commissioners took the charges under advisement.

Bill Blocked To Lift Sales Tax on Food

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—A parliamentary maneuver by five members of the House of Delegates blocked consideration of a bill to lift the Maryland sales tax on all food for human consumption.

Headed by Anne Arundel County Delegate Clarence E. Tyler, the five delegates "requested" that the bill be laid over for another legislative day. Before most delegates knew what had happened, the speaker had granted the request.

Charles M. See (R., Allegheny) waged an unsuccessful fight to have the speaker reconsider his ruling. For the second time this session, the chair's ruling was appealed, but See withdrew his appeal when it appeared that his action might place the bill in jeopardy.

Earlier two measures advocated by Washington area delegates virtually failed during today's House session.

Prince Georges County Delegate T. Raymond Burch said that his resolution on one world government was virtually "killed" by an amendment to the resolution reported out of the judiciary committee today. He said the amendment left the State in the position of being a petitioner for some form of world government, and that if 10 or 12 mores States petition the Government similarly, "we will be subject to orders from a super-government.

Mrs. Leona M. Rush, Montgomery County delegate, saw her suggestion for installation of electrical voting machines in the House voted down this afternoon by a 64-50 roll-call vote. Mrs. Rush said she had first suggested the system in the last Legislature.

Crook Gets $93 And Trousers at Basketball Game

A total of $93 and three pairs of pants were stolen last night from the dressing room of the Christ Episcopal Church gymnasium at 620 G st. se.

Owners of the money and pants were members of the church's senior Sunday School class basketball team who were playing a team from St. Clement's of Alexandria.

The Rev. Carter C. Gillis, spiritual leader of the home team, proved capable of ministering to material needs also and lent the athletes pants to go home in.

Safe Thieves Get $13,650 In Alexandria

Burglars stole a safe containing $13,450 in war bonds and $200 in cash Monday night from the basement of an Alexandria home, police disclosed yesterday.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, chief of Alexandria detectives, said the thieves may be members of the gang that has been robbing Washington gamblers the past two months.

Hawes said the safe—weighing more than 300 pounds—was taken between 7:30 and 11 p. m. Monday from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alton W. Conrad, 704 Chetworth pl., Alexandria.

Conrad, whose occupation police say they do not know, was attending boxing matches at the time. Mrs. Conrad was watching television at the nearby home of a sister, Mrs. Burt Lopatin, 1312 Michigan ave., Alexandria.

Mrs. Conrad said $9500 in bonds was the property of her sister and brother-in-law. The rest—$3950—was owned by W. H. Burgess of 1310 Michigan ave., Alexandria.

Lopatin, operator of the Trans-Lux Restaurant, 732 14th st. nw., said he put the bonds in the safe at the end of the war, and has been meaning to transfer them to a safety deposit vault. They are not negotiable, the Treasury Department said.

Lopatin said Conrad works for the Greyhound Bus lines. The bus company has no record of him. Mrs. Conrad said her husband is manager of Lopatin's restaurant.

Alexandria police records show that three years ago Conrad was convicted and fined $10 by the Alexandria Civil and Police Court on a charge of operating a numbers game. Washington records show that in March, 1943, he was charged with setting up a gaming table and was held for grand jury action.

Inspector Hawes said one of the burglars got into the house through a dining room window and let the others in through the kitchen door.

Mrs. Conrad said her Russian wolfhound, which she described as "very vicious," was in the house at the time. She said she believes the safe robbers "gassed" the dog.

D.C. Woman, 81, Foils Intruders

Even at 81, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley can scream as loudly as any debutante—and two larceny-minded Chicago men will attest to that.

Mrs. Kelley

Mrs. Kelley, former president of the District League of Republican Women, was visiting in Chicago and the men forced their way into her room in the famous Palmer House and tried to rob her.

Chicago police identified the men as James Thompson, 26, unemployed bellboy, and Paul McMurray, 29, both of Chicago.

Mrs. Kelley told police the men pretended they were delivering a telegram when they entered her room Sunday night. She said Thompson grabbed her by the throat and forced her into the bathroom while McMurray took $51 from her purse on the dresser.

Mrs. Kelley's screams attracted the attention of other residents of the hotel and they summoned house detectives. The hotel officers captured the two men before they could escape from the room.

A cousin of Robert Patterson, former Secretary of War, Mrs. Kelley was back in her quarters at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday.

"It was a shock and I'm still shaking," she said, "but it'll wear off."

Bus Driver Routs Robbers

A pair of thugs who apparently had never heard about Guadalacanal, Tarawa and other hot spots in the Pacific tried to rob a Capital Transit bus driver early yesterday.

Crouch

They were routed.

The driver, Edward J. Crouch, 28, of 928 S. Buchanan st. Arlington, a former Marine corporal who saw action in the Pacific during the war, was sitting in his bus at the end of the line, Sheriff rd. and Eastern ave. ne., at 1:30 a. m. when two men boarded.

One of the men went to the back of the bus while the other announced, "This is a stickup."

Fighting inside the bus found the former Marine getting the best of the encounter, which ended when the holdup man spilled into the street. He and his companion fled on foot. Crouch was treated for head cuts at Casualty Hospital.

Crouch is married and the father of a 4-year-old daughter.

Sales Tax Hike Is Proposed

money already appropriated for schools, hospitals, the Sherbow plan for funds to counties, and other essential purposes.

Any bonus plan which comes before him, Lane added, must contain a "specific dedicated tax for the support of such a program."

The Governor also told the Legislature there is no guarantee that the sales tax will continue to yield its estimated $27,500,000 for next year.

This was Lane's first formal statement on a bonus, although he has asked several times before "Where is the money coming from?"

The House bill is due for a third reading Wednesday, as will the Senate bill. It is the Senate bill that contains the financing proposal that Lane finds so onerous.

Observers believe principal enemy to the powerful bonus coalition group is time. The session must end by midnight Thursday.

Earlier Senator Roy Tasco Davis (R., Montgomery), declared the whole bonus question was a maneuver to embarrass the Governor, and said he refused to "be a party to throwing this thing in his (Lane's) face to embarrass him."

The bonus bill which the Assembly is considering would set up a 100-million-dollar fund for payment of bonuses to veterans who served during World War II. Average veteran payments has been estimated at roughly $400.

The plan would be amortized by the issuance of bonds on a 15-year basis to be repaid by sales tax revenues above 20 million dollars, and if those revenues are not sufficient, by an increase in the real property tax up to 22 cents per $100.

Best guess as to the annual cost of the bill would be around eight million dollars over the 15-year basis.

Battle Sent Bill For 2 Area Judges

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 28.—The Clarke-Fenwick bill to provide two more circuit judges for the Virginia area near Washington was passed by the House of Delegates today and sent to the Governor for his signature.

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington moved that constitutional readings of the measure be dispensed with to permit the General Assembly to elect additional judges before it adjourns Saturday week.

In the House committee on federal relations, Magruder's resolution to have the General Assembly rescind its 1944 indorsement of the principle of world federation was squeezed out by a favorable vote of 6-5.

Lively Battle Seen

A lively floor fight is in prospect, since a two-hour public hearing last night precipitated a heated debate between the Daughters of the American Revolution and United World Federalists, advocates of a constitutional federation of nations.

Delegate Edwin Lynch of Fairfax, meanwhile, suffered a setback in the House education committee.

He had introduced a State-wide measure to permit voters to determine whether they wanted to change the method of naming school boards by a trustee electoral board, appointed by the Circuit Court judge. It would then provide a choice between appointment of school boards by the board of supervisors, or election of board members by the people.

Anticipating defeat of the State-wide bill in committee, Lynch amended it to apply only to Fairfax County. But it was killed in that form today.

It appeared that the only conceivable change in naming school boards lies in the Burton bill, which the Senate has passed in amended form. It provides that the trustee electoral board shall nominate two persons to fill school board vacancies, one of whom shall be named by the board of supervisors.

The Senate today passed:

A bill introduced by Lynch and Delegate Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria to permit consolidation of one or more counties and/or cities into a single community. The Magruder-Damm bill to permit Arlington County to operate parking lots in congested areas of sanitary districts.

Girl Loses Dog Bite Suit

The Washington Post

PATRICIA JOAN MARTIN, 18, of 1224 Crittenden st. nw., yesterday lost a suit for $25,000 for dog bite injuries when a District Court jury rejected the damage claim. Her father's claim of $5000 for medical expenses, including plastic surgery which he said was necessary to obliterate scars on her face, also was rejected. Defendant was Louis Armani, 4708 Georgia ave. nw., owner of the police dog, Tippy. Attorneys produced testimony that the girl was injured when she tried to separate Tippy from a dog fight after being warned not to touch the animal

Byrd Income Tax Cut Bill Is Approved

Richmond, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Virginia Senate finance committee put its stamp of approval today on the Byrd automatic income tax cut bill and two lesser tax relief matters that were recommended by the Gray Study Commission.

As both houses of the General Assembly and their committees bore down on their tasks against the oncoming March 11 adjournment these were the other top developments of the legislative day:

The Senate passed the Hilliard bill requiring automobile dealers to spell out for the purchaser the various finance, interest and insurance charges included in a contract sale. The Senate measure, which survived a last-minute attempt to let it languish and die in another committee, now goes to the House.

The House of Delegates apparently smothered the Bailey-Massie-Moncure bill designed to stop the sale of cigarettes as "loss leaders" by recommitting it to its appropriations committee. It would have imposed a $50 tax on wholesale tobacco dealers to provide revenue for enforcing an "unfair sales act."

The automatic income tax cut bill came out of the Senate Finance Committee by a 16 to 2 vote with only one minor amendment. The measure, offered by Senator Harry F. Byrd, jr., with Senators Robert O. Norris, Edward L. Breeden, jr., and Thomas L. Blanton as co-patrons, offers this to the personal and corporate income taxpayers:

If revenues in the general fund exceed the $95,000,000 budget estimate by as much as $4,000,000, a reduction of 10 percent. If the excess of revenues is as much as $7,000,000, a reduction of 15 percent. If the excess amounts to as much as $9,000,000, a maximum reduction of 20 percent.

The bill, conceded an excellent chance of passage and called by Governor Battle the "best of the lot" of numerous tax cut proposals, would be applicable to 1950 State income on which taxes are paid in 1951.

Dairies Seek Milk Price Cut

Three major Washington area dairies will ask for a cut of 1½ cents a quart in the retail price of milk at the hearing scheduled by the Virginia State Milk Commission this morning.

The hearing, set for 10:30 a. m. at the Cameron St. Recreation Center, Alexandria, concerns milk prices in the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area, but price changes there are almost always followed by the dairies in the District and nearby Maryland.

The distributors asking for the retail cut also will ask the Milk Commission to reduce the price they pay to the dairy farmer producers by 69 cents a hundredweight.

Officials of these firms, Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, largest area dairy, Alexandria Dairy Products Co. and Thompson's Dairy, said prices are now so high that distributors have less "spread" between buying and selling costs than in most other cities.

Other dairies, while not expecting to participate in today's hearing, would like to see prices come down and would match cuts ordered by the Milk Commission, their spokesman said.

Spokesmen for the Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association, which represents the suppliers of most of the area's milk, would not comment on the price cut proposal, saying their views would be stated at the hearing.

Distributors pointed out that a seasonal price cut usually is made about April 1, and said an earlier reduction has been justified this year, even before this time, because of warm weather and current high production of milk.

The present delivered price of Grade A milk, cream on the top or homogenized, is 21½ cents a quart in the greater Washington area, with some dairies adding a penny a quart for Vitamin D homogenized. The store price varies generally from 19 to 21 cents a quart.

A 1½-cent cut would bring local prices in line with other cities, Robert H. Rawlins, production manager for Thompson's Dairy, said yesterday.

SHE'S young, she's pretty, she's talented! But most engaging is her enthusiasm and natural manner. Jean Rainey, now playing the piano and singing at the Colony cocktail lounge, is sure to become a local favorite as the lounge, on De Sales ave., becomes known as a meeting and drinking place.

Recently from North Carolina and the state college for women, Jean looks upon the entertainment world as she would her own home town. She reacts with just good manners and a faith in people. Others' reaction to her is brought out when she exclaims, "People here are the friendliest I've ever known."

Under the spotlight, Jean has a piano technique that is clear and precise, as befits a recent music graduate. She sings in a voice that is husky, but so low it's almost a whisper. Folk songs are her favorite fare. She enjoys the rambling tales of unhappy love, or the adventures of a mountain family.

Her face has a classic beauty, and one would think that blues would be her forte. But, says she, "I find I can't sing the blues; they aren't my type." A couple of examples seem to disprove the point. But she might be right in one way: the love songs are old, over sung, and tired. The tales she likes to sing are as refreshing as Jean herself is.

HARMONICA playing may seem like kid stuff, but a look-in at Stan Fisher's Mayflower Lounge show will convince anyone that it's an instrument fit for real virtuosity. Fisher is a young man who has given concerts on the harmonica for years. And he finds it possible to present enough variety, by imitating other instruments, to hold an audience for an entire evening.

A floor show at the Mayflower, at which Fisher is the only attraction other than Henry Brandon's orchestra, often starts lukewarm. People seem to be asking how entertaining can a harmonica player be? But after two or three pieces, eyes are glued to the instrument in amazement.

Sasscer In, Neely Out As Speaker

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) has accepted an invitation to address the Federation of Citizens Assocations at its annual dinner March 7.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, who was originally invited to speak, canceled the engagement last Friday.

Neely withdrew after former federation president John H. Connaughton said the invitation to Neely was about to wreck the dinner.

Connaughton criticized the Senator for his open stand in favor of the transfer of Negro students to Central High School.

Sasscer, a native of Prince Georges County, was once a student at Central High School. He said yesterday that he had not yet decided on the topic of his speech. He declined to reveal his stand on the Central controversy.

'Sit-In' Strikers 'Feeling Low' After Four Days Without Food

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—"Feeling low" was the word today from 17 greeting card workers who were in the fourth day of a sit-in strike without food.

Chest colds beset some of the 10 men and seven women, after a weekend without heat during the city's coldest weather of the winter. "They're all liable to end up in a hospital," said a policeman as he surveyed the strikers stretched out asleep on boxes and crates in a back room at offices of Fuld and Co.

"They're feeling pretty low, and pretty hungry," he said.

At the company's request, police have orders to prevent any food from being brought into the offices, and to bar the return of any demonstrator who leaves.

The sit-in began Friday night in protest against the company's plan to move to Catskill, N. Y., 90 miles north of here, without giving the workers severance pay.

The company says it has to move because of high rents here, and that its contract with the union, the independent Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Union, does not provide for severance pay.

Company President Henry Goldsmith said yesterday the workers had been invited to make the move with the company. He called the strikers "a bunch of Reds."

The union hasn't commented on this.

Hospital Witness Hits Sander Claim

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 28 (AP).—A young hospital librarian testified today she heard Dr. Hermann N. Sander say the cancer-tortured woman he is accused of murdering "died peacefully and quietly after the injection."

Miss Anita Ducharme, 19, was called by the State in an attempt to counter defense claims that Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, was dead before air was injected into her veins.

The pretty assistant medical records librarian at Hillsboro County Hospital corroborated testimony of her superior—Librarian Josephine Connor—that she heard Dr. Sander say he made the injection and expected a "reprimand."

Miss Ducharme said Dr. Sander told County Medical Referee Robert Biron it was "the first time he had done it."

Earlier, the husband of the woman the 41-year-old doctor is accused of murdering in "an act of mercy" testified he still feels "kindly" toward Dr. Sander.

Much of the legal maneuvering was centered in attempting to pinpoint the moment of Mrs. Borroto's death.

Chief Defense Counsel Louis E. Wyman revealed to newsmen he would call two surprise witnesses—both nurses at the hospital—alone this line.

Attorney General William L. Phinney told newsmen he hoped to complete the State's case Wednesday or Thursday.

The courtroom was hushed as Borroto, 65, retired oil salesman, told the judge and a 13-man jury of the high respect he holds for Dr. Sander.

Borroto testified "if he (Dr. Sander) was my own brother I couldn't feel more kindly toward him." Borroto said his ailing wife had "the will to live" but added later "we knew it was simply a question of days."

Fishermen Marooned As Icepack Breaks Up

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 28 (AP).—About 150 fishermen were marooned temporarily today when a Lake Erie icepack broke up.

The United States Coast Guard reported that all either had been rescued or made their own way to safety within five hours after a 25-mile wind shift caused the break-up.

Leopard Dies Few Hours After Recapture

Oklahoma City, Feb. 28 (AP).—Oklahoma City's now-famed leopard died in his cage at 6:45 p. m. (EST) tonight, about 15 hours after he was captured in a concentrated hunt.

Julian Frazier, zoo director who led the 61-hour hunt which finally ended in the fugitive cat's passive capture, said "it is hard to say what caused his death."

The animal, which leaped to freedom from his 18-foot-deep pit Saturday afternoon at the Lincoln Park Zoo, was taken in the early morning hours after he ate two drugged hunks of meat.

The leopard, captured in India some 60 days ago and brought here with his mate only last week, had been drowsy throughout the day—the effects of the powerful drug.

The horsemeat loaded with knockout drops did what 4000 hunters failed to do.

The meat was put out as bait near the barless pit from which he made his 18-foot leap to freedom Saturday.

The 175-pound animal was found dopey, but still kicking, in his pit at 2 a. m. He had slipped past the guards patrolling the 40-acre zoo area.

Frazier said the leopard probably came back for food. It had been definitely established he roamed at least 18 miles from the zoo.

"This is the only meal ticket he knew," the weary zookeeper said. "He had just been here a week but those things are smart."

A longing for his mate may have had something to do with it, Frazier added.

Woodlawn Residents Deplore Attack

Recent attack upon County Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh, sr., by a group of citizens association representatives was deplored in a resolution signed by 3 residents of Woodlawn received by the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday.

The petition stated that newspapers recently had carried stories "That a so-called public interest committee, composed of some of the executive board of the Woodlawn Citizens Association and other groups, had demanded the resignation of one of the commissioners, T. Hammond Welsh, sr."

The resolution further states: "We, citizens of Woodlawn, wish to make it plain that the members of the executive board of the citizens association speak only for themselves and have not been authorized to make such a demand by the Woodlawn Citizens Association."

It further declares that "we believe in democratic government and do not believe that any official should be intimidated, threatened or harassed by a small pressure group. We regret that this group has seen fit to imply that their judgment represents that of the entire community."

Another petition signed by 19 residents of the Landover Hills area asked for a traffic light on Defense Highway between Woodlawn and Landover Hills

Strange Democracy

Chairman McMillan of the House District Committee is apparently trying to rival Stalin and Company in the bastardization of words. In urging his colleagues not to sign the petition to discharge the District home rule bill, he asks for support from those who "really believe in our democratic form of government and orderly functioning of regular standing House committees." He seems to be saying that democracy consists of a handful of legislators in the House sitting on a bill that has been passed by the Senate, indorsed by the President and the two major parties, because of fear that if the bill is reported to the House it will be enacted. In other words, democracy is minority dictation. This is precisely the kind of semantics in which the Communists indulge. In our opinion, the chairman of the House District Committee has added another argument in favor of signatures on the home rule petition. The bill ought to be brought out and passed not only to restore political rights to this disfranchised community and relieve Congress of its intolerable burden as a city council, but also to teach Chairman McMillan the meaning of democratic government.

Maritime Shift

As reports continue that the President may abolish the Maritime Commission and reconstitute it in the Department of Commerce, it is important to look at the real source of trouble in the commission. That trouble is, purely and simply, a reluctance to administer the law as it is written. The commission majority has convinced itself that bigger shipping subsidies are desirable, and it has contrived devious ways to grant them—over the consistent objections of one commissioner, Raymond S. McKeough, and against the biting criticism of the House Executive Expenditures Committee and the Comptroller General.

We sympathize fully with the President's efforts both to hold down subsidies and to bring them out in the open, and we support the idea of an over-all subsidy study. Once Congress has set a subsidy policy, however, the job of a regulatory body is to administer it fairly. Here it becomes apparent that the fault is not so much with Maritime Commission structure as with the attitude of the members carrying out policy.

Unless the President is prepared to recommend the consolidation of all transportation promotion functions in a single agency, it is hard to justify the singling out of a single commission for reorganization. That would merely serve to increase the hodgepodge in which regulatory bodies operate. Whatever may be said for a Federal department of transportation, much could be accomplished under existing law by the promulgation of a unified set of objectives for transportation agencies in a national transportation policy. Specifically with respect to the Maritime Commission, improvement could be made by the simple means of replacing present commissioners, when their terms expire, with men whose first dedication is to the public interest.

Veterans' Champion

It is refreshing to have at least one veterans' organization, the American Veterans Committee, come forward in support of the improved and streamlined service for veterans recommended by the Hoover Commission. The AVC has directly challenged the stand-patism that has characterized the American Legion's frenetic crusade against reorganization of the Veterans' Administration. It has done so in terms of the veterans' own direct interest in reforming the archaic procedures that now dilute and delay the benefits due them for service to their country during the war.

Despite irresponsible and altogether implausible assertions by the Legion that "American veterans are the targets in a vicious attack" by the Hoover Commission, the plain intent behind all the reorganization proposals was to give veterans better, more expeditious and more economical treatment. When a veteran's widow has to wait as long as three or four months to receive payment on her husband's insurance, one would suppose that all spokesmen for veterans would join in a demand for the reduction of red tape. The wastefulness of existing Veterans' Administration procedures is reflected in impairment of services to veterans. Economy in this area would enlarge rather than reduce veterans' benefits.

The attitude taken by the AVC is a progressive one in terms of its members' interests as veterans and as citizens alike. And it seems worth observation, in passing, that this attitude finds characteristic expression as well in respect of home rule for the District of Columbia. The American Legion insists on letting bad enough alone; the AVC has spoken out for extension of democracy to the Capital of the Nation. A world of philosophy seems revealed in this contrast.

What Acheson Said

Secretary Acheson yesterday sought to put the record straight about his January 25 comment on Alger Hiss. That comment had been subject to a variety of interpretations which perverted his words and did a disservice to Mr. Acheson's own office and an injury to the Administration he serves. It was clear from the outset, to quote our own editorial on Mr. Acheson's comment, that "in spite of Mr. Acheson's weighed words to the contrary, what millions of people will feel is that a high official—the fourth in the Nation's hierarchy—was casting doubt on the judicial process which landed a friend in jail."

This proved to be the case. Even the well known lawyers—friends and admirers of Mr. Acheson—who signed a joint letter to this newspaper in criticism of our editorial read ideas into the statement of the Secretary of State that were not there. They imagined that Mr. Acheson was reaffirming "the fundamental principle that no man is guilty of crime until the courts have confirmed his guilt." Secretary Acheson, as he now repeats, was doing nothing of the sort. He was expressing compassion with a friend in distress. He says, furthermore, that he was inspired to make his comment as Secretary of State at his press conference by the association between his office and the Hiss matter which the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations had drawn at the time of his confirmation.

The new statement is without melodrama and is more lucid than its predecessor, and, indeed, is an eloquent essay in the humanities. But there is nothing in it which persuades us to change our view of either the impropriety or the unwisdom of the intervention. Secretary Acheson was confronted with a choice, or, rather, a conflict, of loyalties. As Dean Acheson his expression of compassion testified to his highmindedness. But in the State Department he is Secretary Acheson, whose words cannot be divorced from his official position, and what he says is interpreted as the testimony of the Secretary of State. This imposes the duty of measuring his words for their effect. The repercussions of what Mr. Acheson said and did not say—and the Democratic candidates for reelection this year can bear witness to some of those repercussions—are surely proof that the man could not separate himself from his office in this act of commiseration. We fail to see that the initial statement when he was up for office served as warrant for what he said while in office.

In any event Secretary Acheson has clarified his original statement in a manner that will stop misinterpretations except by the hounds of the chase who have played politics with it. In the public interest this wretched and subordinate incident should be closed. Mr. Acheson is not expendable for this cause at this momentous time in our foreign relations. For in him the country has a Secretary of State of caliber and distinction, and anything that detracts from his standing in the country and his influence in our diplomacy is something to be deplored.

Focus On Crime

In approving the Kefauver resolution for an investigation of interstate crime, the Senate Judiciary Committee has shown that it understands the scope of the menace. The fact is, as various State and city crime commissions have reported, that crime syndicates are operating on a Nation-wide scale, and their very organization often renders local officials impotent to deal with them. The proposed inquiry has been broadened from a study of gambling and racketeering alone to include all forms of crime, but the committee also has asked for $100,000, double the original amount, to accomplish this larger job.

To be sure, the committee is precluded from recommending any change in State gambling laws. It can, however, identify persons and corporations engaged in criminal activity and propose specific Federal legislation to cope with them. It can be of particular service in noting the extent to which interstate communications facilities are being employed illegally. Previous private investigations have indicated that telephone and telegraph facilities are essential tools in bookmaking and the numbers racket; perhaps the committee can induce the Federal Communications Commission to tighten up on its policing.

We hope that the Rules Committee and the Senate as a whole will display the same understanding, and that the Administration will support the Kefauver resolution vigorously. Such support would make up for the curious lack of enthusiasm for Federal action shown by the Department of Justice at the recent conference of State and municipal law enforcement officials. What has been causing the Administration qualms, reportedly, is the fear that the Judiciary Committee may misuse its investigative mandate to demand executive files. This is a separate matter to be met if it arises; the important thing is for the Administration to go on record as favoring the move to get the facts on crime.

Concurrently with approval of the Kefauver resolution, the House District Subcommittee has asked for $40,000 more to investigate gambling in Washington. The subcommittee is indubitably right in stating that no probe of crime here can be complete without the inclusion of gambling; indeed, gambling is the root of much serious crime, and any attempt to gloss it over would distort the whole crime picture. If the subcommittee will use the additional money to follow all leads without fear or favor, it can throw a great deal of light on the seeds of crime in Washington.

Lodge Advises The GOP

Senator Lodge has cut the ground from under both the die-hards and the "me-too" element in the Republican Party in his sensible advice on how to "Modernize the GOP" in the current Atlantic. To talk of returning "to a position of unmistakable conservatism" or to the good old days, as some Republicans do, is to propose reversal of the course of history. For better or for worse, the Hoover era is gone forever. No party could take us back to it. If the Republicans should come to power, they would have to start afresh from the point where they happened to take over the reins. They could not sweep out social security, regulation of labor relations, farm benefits, or high taxes any more than the Conservatives in Great Britain could undo the nationalization of industry that has already taken place under the Labor Party. They would have to start with the situation as they found it.

Before the GOP can win, says Senator Lodge, it must have a program "which is obviously good for the country, a program which can be stated in specific terms and which will put us back on a competitive basis with the Democrats. Such a program does not mean 'me-too'; neither does it mean mere negation. Instead of scolding the darkness, let us light a lamp." The Senator then proceeds to outline forward-looking proposals dealing with civil rights, social legislation, public health, old age, agriculture and labor relations. Often he is less specific than might be desired, but his main thesis seems to us indisputable. To command support, any political party must deal with the issues of the hour. If it is a responsible party it will deal with them honestly and within the limitations of our economic means and our free society. But it cannot ignore the "felt necessities of the times" and either win an election or remain a virile opposition party.

Senator Lodge candidly acknowledges that no one can say that the middle ground on which he chooses to stand would bring victory to the GOP. But from the public point of view the victory of any particular party is of secondary importance. What is of vital importance is that the country should have a strong, alert, sensible and trustworthy party to which it can turn when the people decide to throw out the incumbent administration. We strongly suspect that one reason for the weakness of the Republican Party over the last two decades has been its disposition to place partisan victory ahead of the public welfare. It is true, of course, that political parties are always under powerful pressure to take that course. But the Republican Party might enhance its standing and popularity by giving more thought to how the best interests of the people can be served within a free society and less to how the next election might conceivably be won.

Harry Lauder

It was curious that the news of Sir Harry Lauder's death coincided with a reference to him in the current installment of Mr. Churchill's memoirs in the New York Times. Mr. Churchill said he had quoted Lauder in his Canadian speech in 1940. The words "that grand old comedian" were in Mr. Churchill's notes, and on the way to the Parliament House where the speech was delivered, Mr. Churchill thought of "minstrel" instead. Mr. Churchill exclaims: "What an improvement!" Harry Lauder, who was listening at home in Scotland, was enchanted with the reference. It pleased Mr. Churchill, too; for he is always in search of exactly the right word, and this was it for one who "by his inspiring songs and valiant life, has rendered measureless service to the Scottish race and to the British Empire."

The minstrelsy of Harry Lauder still lives on. "Roamin' in the Gloamin'" and "I Love a Lassie" are as imperishable as the lochs and braes of Lauder's bonnie Scotland. They tell of love and laughter in a more innocent age, with counterpoint provided by nostalgia and the pangs of absence. Lauder's songs, doubtless, will always be sung wherever men in the English-speaking countries foregather convivially. And to an older generation they will bring back to mind the jaunty little Scotsman in highland attire, complete with his crooked and gnarled blackthorn, who sang the British people's troubles away in the First World War, and never interrupted his performances even when his only and beloved son, Capt. John Lauder, was killed. No foreign minstrel packed them in as Lauder did in America.

CAEDMON AND THE ANGEL

At the stable of the abbey
Caedmon bedded down the stall;
And he heard across the courtyard
The harmonic rise and fall
Of the hymns of praise sung nightly
As the harp passed round the hall.

While he toiled alone one evening
Lo! a rush of shining wings
And the angel's voice came chiding,
"Only Caedmon never brings
Song for tribute: Sing, poor creature,
As God's humble lover sings!"

And the herdsman of St. Hilda
(He the lowly eremite, Earliest of England's poets)
Mirrored in his song a light
Like the dawnfire of Creation,
Like an angel in the night.

Coal for Churches

The District authorities have apparently reached a "new low" in appraising religion by classifying churches as "nonessential" in the current coal shortage restrictions. Bracketing churches with amusement places and taverns is low tribute indeed to the moral and spiritual powerhouses of our people.

Add to this the bad example that our Capital City gives in this respect to all other communities in our Nation and we have incalculable harm done. As a visitor in Washington I am disgusted with such an exhibition of irreligion.

D. C. Milk Prices

On February 20 you featured an article to the effect that Washington was among the three cities paying the highest prices for milk in the country. The article also mentioned that since August the price received was in excess of $6 per hundred. I find, however, that the base price per hundred ranged from $5.04 in August to $5.48 in November.

It may also be of interest for you to know that both Richmond and Charlottesville pay higher prices for milk than Washington.

We farmers in this area are forced to pay high wages for labor because we are in competition with the Washington labor market. The Health Department through its stringent regulations makes a large capital investment inevitable. Considering all these facts, the farmer receives not one cent more than he is entitled to.

Polish Hams

In the January 24 issue of the New York Journal of Commerce there was a news item about 3440 cases of canned hams and 2600 cases of canned picnics (the pork shoulder) arriving in New York port from Poland.

Now, when the industry, including producer, processor and retailer of the pork has made such a grand, concerted effort to merchandise pork products, such an effort that the largest peacetime crop of hogs in American history is being marketed without more than a moderate lowering of prices to the farmer, it does not seem sensible to be importing pork from foreign countries.

If it were a matter of helping Polish farmers in Poland to get a better price in a world competitive market for their labors, that would be one thing. But if in reality it is a form of subsidizing Soviet management, that is another thing. It is very doubtful whether the good people of Poland, working under the yoke of Russian communism, get more than a bare living for their labor. It is likely that these Polish hams are merely a form of tribute to Moscow.

Fuchs' Schizophrenia

Marquis Childs is to be commended on his February 22 plea for more Government attention toward mental hygiene and increased appropriation for mental research. His column is on an enlightened level, until one gets to the part about Klaus Fuchs.

Against "the psychiatrists" which Mr. Childs cursorily quotes as saying there is no such thing as "controlled schizophrenia," I would like to pit the opinion of Karl A. Menninger, one of the most famous men in this field. In his The Human Mind, on page 82, Menninger says, "Utter objectivity is the aim of every scientist—it is a correct and fruitful but inhuman attitude and typically schizoid. Because many men are too human or too little schizoid in makeup, they fall of great achievement in science."

I cannot see anything more logical than the "controlled schizophrenia" of Dr. Fuchs. To be exceptionally brilliant, it is natural that he be exceptionally schizoid, whether he is thinking on the plane of man vs. nature or Communist vs. capitalist.

Mr. Childs goes on to say that the "ordinary person will think such treason as that of Dr. Fuchs originated in a diseased mind, then in the next paragraph he assumes the point of view of "ordinary person" as his own and in words like "sickness," "contamination," and "disease" implies that communism is not a political philosophy, but rather a mental illness which might be combatted through clinical research.

"Lost" District Civil Rights Laws

In view of the confusion which still exists regarding the civil rights legislation enacted during the Reconstruction period in the District of Columbia, the following facts may be of interest to your readers.

The so-called "lost law" of 1872 which the District corporation counsel has finally admitted may yet be in force was passed by the Legislative Council in June of that year, having been introduced by Lewis Douglass, the eldest son of the Negro political leader, Frederick Douglass, appointed by President Grant to the upper house of the District government. This law provided that the prices of food and drinks on sale at hotels and restaurants be posted in a conspicuous place and that fines be levied for violation of the provision whereby hotelkeepers, etc., were required to serve "respectable or well-dressed persons without regard to race or color."

In November of the same year a test case came before Judge Snell in the Police Court involving Dr. Alexander T. Augusta of the Freedmen's Hospital and R. W. Tompkins, a clerk at the Freedmen's Bank, who were refused service at Freund's ice cream parlor. The colored men were asked to pay $2 in advance for a plate of ice cream usually priced at 15 cents; they refused to do so and brought the matter to court. Judge Snell made clear in his decision that the law had been clearly violated, brushing aside the arguments of the defendants that the plaintiffs had refused to remove their hats and had used "coarse and abusive language." However, in an appeal the following month to the District Supreme Court Justice McArthur dismissed the case on the ground that the complaint had been improperly drawn up and that the nature of the offense did not come within the scope of the act.

In September, 1874, Messrs. Harvey and Holden, the proprietors of Harvey's Restaurant, then located on Pennsylvania ave., were sued under the provisions of the Civil Rights Acts for refusal of service. This was a particularly significant case, since the plaintiffs, Prof. John M. Langston and Dr. Charles B. Purvis, were men of some considerable importance. Professor Langston was head of the law faculty at Howard University, of which he was acting president, and Dr. Purvis on the medical staff of the same institution. Both men, moreover, claimed that they had previously been served at Harvey's in the company of white friends; Langston at the time was a member of the District Board of Health and a prominent member of the Republican Party.

Judge Snell in the Police Court awarded judgment against the restaurant and ordered that its license be suspended for a period of one year. Whether Harvey's was actually closed has not been recorded; however, no record of an appeal can be traced until February 7, 1876, when the case came up before the District Supreme Court. On this occasion the District attorney filed a plea of nolle prosse before the verdict of the court could be handed down.

The situation with regard to discrimination in theaters and other places of public entertainment is somewhat less clear. An act had been passed in June, 1869, by the Corporation of Washington declaring it to be unlawful for owners of such places of entertainment to refuse to sell tickets of admission to any part of the house to persons on account of race or color, and providing for a fine of between $10 and $20 for each such offense. This law was subsequently incorporated into the code of the territory and can be found under the compiled laws of 1873 under the heading, "Title XII, Chapter 11."

It would seem likely, however, that the provisions of this law were systematically evaded by the theater owners, who continued their practice of selling seats to Negroes only in the second gallery, according to Southern practice. To discontinue such evasion of the law, A. K. Browne, a white Republican member of the Legislative Council, introduced in June, 1873, a bill making it unlawful for theater proprietors to mark as "reserved" any seats which had not been sold prior to the time of the performance.

A case involving the National Theater was heard in 1874 and judgment was granted by the Police Court; in November of the same year the appeal was heard before Justice Olin of the District Supreme Court. Justice Olin found in favor of the defendants, considering that the law represented "an unwarrantable infringement of private rights."

In the compiled statutes of the District of Columbia edited by W. S. Abert and B. G. Lovejoy published in 1894 it is interesting to note that both the laws involving hotels and restaurants passed in 1872 and 1873 are to be found (Chapter XVI Secs. 148-154). No mention of the laws involving theaters and other places of amusement was made, however, and it must be assumed that the action of the District Supreme Court in 1874 was responsible for this omission. Though the District Code of 1901 completely omitted all reference to any civil rights legislation which might be in force, the Comprehensive General Index of the Laws of the District, edited by William Meyers and published in 1912 contains a reference to "Discrimination between Guests on account of Color" (Complied Statutes 184 Section 150). It would seem to appear that by this time the attitude of the District courts having proved consistently so hostile to the enforcement of civil rights legislation, Negroes had abandoned temporarily further attempts to seek legal redress under these statutes. The District courts must now rule whether these laws, even though they have fallen into desuetude, are still constitutional and enforceable.

Putting First Things Last

By Malvina Lindsay

Millikan's Rebellion

DR. ROBERT A. Millikan's recent refusal to speak to a sleepy and exhausted dinner audience is more than an ironic, humorous or trivial incident. In the field of human relations, it parallels, in my opinion, both his exactness and his daring in penetrating the unknown world of cosmic rays.

Once when reporting for a news service a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, I received from my editor this telegram: "Interview Millikan on immortality. Three hundred words."

Dr. Millikan, who at that time was receiving much scientific attention for his cosmic ray investigations, did not flinch at the overwhelming subject presented him. He expressed his views clearly—if not too specifically—and he gave me an impressive sense of his humility and openmindedness as a scientist. I had no trouble putting the interview in 300 words.

If he had spoken at the Van Nuys (Calif.) Chamber of Commerce dinner, where he was to be the oratorical piece de resistance, he would probably have been equally concise and inspiring. But the audience was denied the privilege of hearing him, even long enough to sense the stature of a great man of science, because it first had to listen to a past president's report, an incoming president's forecast, many introductions and much routine business—all of which took more than three hours.

IN TELLING the audience that its mind was too weary at the late hour to listen to him, Dr. Millikan did what a few speakers of lesser renown have done once in a blue moon. But his fame has directed national attention for the first time to such an incident.

Fortunately this has come at a time when the open season for annual dinners, banquets, luncheons, conventions is beginning. One can hope—though with not too much expectation—that is will have its effect.

The Millikan incident points up a paradoxical and frustrating situation in one phase of American life, that of the public assemblage. Our widespread practice in these to put first things last, to shunt off the important to make way for trivial is unexplainable. Is it because we fear—and put off—coming to grips with the tough questions we schedule for discussion?

Anyone who has attended organization dinners, banquets, luncheons, speaking programs is familiar with the line-up that precedes the main speaker—the bigwigs who must be introduced; the persons who must be thanked publicly; the reports, the announcements; the inevitable musical program (despite the fact that orators are not run in on symphony concerts); maybe even a dancing act or fashion promenade; an array of 10-minute (?) speakers who always leave their watches at home. Then, finally, when the audience is in a condition to go home in ambulances, comes the great man or woman with the message.

NOW STRANGELY this goes on in a country of widely touted efficiency, one in which everyone is in a rush, or at least complaining of being in one. It goes on despite the fact that radio and television have been training speakers to measure their words to the split second, and have been planning and timing their programs completely in advance.

One reason many organizations find it hard to get challenging speakers is that the person with something to say is often too busy to sit through the long-drawn-out preliminaries of almost any kind of a meeting. Yet if there ever was a time when public discussion of serious subjects was needed it is now. And the "live" meeting in which the audience sees the speaker in the flesh, and can question and discuss points that are raised, has an impact that reaches further than any meeting via celluloid or air wave.

It is true that these boring preliminaries often are very important to organization members. But why do they have to come first? Why in the mental menu of almost any public dinner is the subject of the evening the status of a demi-tasse? Dr. Millikan's lost speech was to have been on a chapter from his new book The Road to Peace. What could be more important for any audience anywhere to hear and ponder over?

One cannot blame the Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce too much for this mishap. It was merely following a folk custom that has gained a vise-like grip on organizations everywhere—a grip that could be symptomatic of our general escapism from the decisions we face. Perhaps this grip can be weakened if Dr. Millikan's trail-blazing is not allowed to be forgotten by program committees and by other after-dinner speakers bold enough to act likewise.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The American Responsibility

LONDON—Now that the tremendous excitement of the election is dying down, the leaders of both parties here are beginning to face an unpleasant fact that has, apparently, already been noted in Washington. To be blunt, the new political lineup greatly increases the probability of another, still more shattering British financial crisis, which may occur some time during the next 12 months.

Last summer, Sir Stafford Cripps narrowly avoided catastrophe by the drastic expedient of devaluing sterling and imposing new measures of domestic austerity. Thus far, devaluation has been brilliantly successful. Indeed, the Exchequer is positively embarrassed by the inflow of gold and dollars into London. If the balance sheet looks too good, it is feared that Britain's share of Marshall aid may be cut.

For the long run, however, the real problems created by devaluation have not yet been faced. Because of higher import costs, domestic prices have risen and are still rising perceptibly. The workers, with less buying power in their wage packets, want more money in them. The wage freeze that was precariously maintained until the election is already rapidly turning into a late spring-like wage thaw. Another attack of inflation threatens to send up all British production costs, and thus to destroy all the stimulus given to British exports by cheapening sterling.

IN THIS situation, Sir Stafford Cripps and his staff were planning to present a strongly deflationary budget after the election. The aim was to counter other inflationary tendencies that could not be wholly controlled by insisting upon the sternest governmental economy all along the line.

This was all very well, when Cripps, Prime Minister Clement Attlee and the other Labor Party chieftains thought they could count on another five years in office with a strong majority. Now that they must carry on with the narrowest imaginable majority, and with the shadow of another general election always hanging over them, the whole outlook has changed. Economy is disagreeable at the best of times. It is almost impossibly painful on the eve of a political campaign.

What makes matters worse is the obvious fact that governmental economies can only be made, on any important scale, in two broad areas. Welfare outlays may be reduced—which will be real political poison. Or the already diminished British defense expenditures, which now run around 750 million pounds sterling annually, may be cut still further.

Maintaining adequate military strength is an absolutely essential part of Britain's remarkable postwar conjuring trick, of continuing to play a great power's part without a great power's resources. Previous suggestions of defense cuts, it can now be disclosed, have twice before moved the British chiefs of staff to offer their resignations in a body. The issue of defense versus welfare is also understood to be the principal source of friction within the cabinet, and particularly the origin of the embittered feud between Ernest Bevin and Aneurin Bevan.

POSSIBLY there may be a bipartisan approach to the budget problem, although the rage and disappointment of the Laborites and the eager expectation of the Tories will make collaboration difficult. Possibly Sir Stafford Cripps, whose iron character cannot be underrated, will carry the thing through by himself.

Meanwhile, it is also difficult to hope for help where help should come from—the United States. Cripps and the men around him have been driven close to neurosis by the more extreme follies of American policy. Although anyone who knows the oil lobby's power in Washington should understand the point, British officials cannot see, for example, why we should wish to transform nearly half British Marshall aid into a direct subsidy for American oil companies. The "conditions" attached to our aid are most bitterly complained of.

Sympathetic Anglo-American understanding and mutual reliance offers the best hope of wise action here. This understanding does not exist at the moment. It cannot exist until the State Department, the Treasury, and the ECA take the initiative to improve existing relationships.

We must remember, we are now the leaders of the Western world. We cannot continue to practice the utmost political self-indulgence at home, while demanding the strictest standards of rectitude and austerity in our allies. If this lesson is not learned, and if the requirements of Britain's situation are not faced, the British conjuring trick will fail. Britain will go out of business as a great power and the whole Western confederation against Soviet aggression will collapse in ruins. That will be the price of continued adolescence in American policy-making.

California Politics

By Marquis Childs

Glamour, Brains And Oratory

NOTHING that California ever does is on a scale less than supercolossal, whether It's movie spectacles or weather, good and bad. That goes double for the political campaign just now coming up.

Childs

In the primary Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas is setting out to defeat Senator Sheridan Downey who is running for a third term. From her career on the stage Mrs. Douglas brings to politics the intensity of a highly dramatic temperament and an energy that could have developed only in the atmosphere that produces those giant geraniums and sunkist starlets.

Already Mrs. Douglas has campaigned once up and down the Pacific slope, from the north with its redwood forests to the date palm groves of the south. Now she is starting out again for another sweep and the reports are that the lady is drawing large houses at almost every appearance.

Downey was once a ham-and-egger in the classic California tradition, with bigger and better pensions every other Thursday. He is also an orator of great persuasion. In late years the Senator has become deeply involved in a quarrel over California's fabulous Central Valley with its far-flung irrigation system supporting highly profitable specialized farming.

THIS QUARREL promises to be the center ring in the primary circus. Mrs. Douglas and her adherents in the liberal-labor-left wing of the Democratic Party charge Downey with selling out to private power and agricultural interests and in league with them throttling the development of the State.

On his side Downey charges a conspiracy directed from Washington to control the valley. He has written a whole book about it and made innumerable speeches. His chief target in the Capital is Commissioner of Reclamation Michael W. Straus. In the course of several congressional hearings Downey charged that Straus and former Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes connived to force out Straus' predecessor, Harry Bashore.

It is at this point that Ickes, himself, the old warrior, gets into the act. Called to testify last fall, he accused Downey of "unabashed perjury" and read from his diary to document his statement that he had pleaded several times with Bashore to stay on. Curiously enough, the record of this testimony has never been printed.

ICKES will in all likelihood go out to California as the contest waxes hotter to compaign for Mrs. Douglas. As one of his friends put it, "He's complaining about going way out there at his age but if you ask me, it would take the Marine Corps to keep him out of that fight." As he proved once again in 1948 when he added the only touches of humor to a grim campaign, Ickes is a devastating opponent.

In the Democratic governorship primary, James Roosevelt, eldest son of FDR is the only important contender. In fact, if Roosevelt had a conservative opponent in his own party he would be better off.

Gov. Earl Warren is a candidate for a third term and he will file both in the Republican primary, the party to which he belongs, and in the Democratic primary. Under the wacky California system party lines are crossed as though they did not exist. The expectation is that conservative Democrats, who deeply resent Jimmy Roosevelt, will vote for Warren in the Democratic primary.

Warren's popularity in the State is an impressive fact. The Republican hope is that the Governor, in spite of an unprecedented third term, will pull the whole ticket through. In the Senate race the leading contender is Representative Richard M. Nixon, chiefly distinguished for his part in getting the Hiss case into the courts. But he has a fairly formidable opponent in Fred Hauser, judge of the Superior Court of Los Angeles.

The primary election is on June 6. Almost anything can happen on that date and probably will. In the meantime, Californians will be treated to such a contest of glamour, brains, oratory and just plain politics as has rarely been seen.

Tight Loyalty Test Is Voted Into Science Foundation Bill

Text of Amendment

Here is what the Smith amendment provides:

"No person shall be employed by the foundation and no scholarship shall be awarded to any person by the foundation until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have investigated such person and reported to the foundation that such person is loyal to the United States, believes in our system of government and is not and has not been at any time a member of any organization declared subversive by the Attorney General or any organization that teaches or advocates the overthrow of the Government by force or violence.

An earlier motion by Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.) to "strike out the enacting clause" and thus kill the bill was shouted down. Rankin charged "some of these foundations" are used as a vehicle for Communist propaganda.

The amendment placing a ceiling on funds for the agency was offered by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) with support of the floor leadership.

Research in Pure Science

While the bill is designed chiefly to foster research in "pure" science, one departure would enable the foundation to support studies in the field of applied science in National defense matters, after consultation with the Secretary of Defense.

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) moved to limit the foundation to "basic research" even on National Defense items. His amendment failed 94 to 73 on a teller count.

Besides evaluating other Government research programs and correlating Federal studies with private and public projects, the foundation would train and develop a new pool of young scientists through Federal scholarships and subsidies.

Human Rights Bill Approved 5 to 2 by Senate Committee

crimination in employment, education and public accommodations. The measure as it stands permits inquiry into complaints "alleging" discrimination.

Senator Allen J. Frear, jr., voted "present," saying his views would be conditioned by Senate debate on FEPC.

The measure calls for an 11-member commission to be appointed by the President, subject to Senate confirmation. It's primary assignment would be to apply the Golden Rule to District racial problems, investigate reports of violation of civil rights, and prepare recommendations for legislation.

Kefauver urged the committee to withhold action on the bill until District home rule becomes law.

Home Rule Contention

"The commission would be far more effective," said Kefauver "if an elected city council directed it, rather than Congress."

Neely, author of the bill, snapped back: "House passage of home rule this year doesn't have a bit more chance than a snowball in hell. They will never get the necessary 60 petition signatures to bring home rule to a vote."

For this reason, said Neely, the civil rights bill should not be delayed.

Kefauver, who sponsored and steered home rule legislation through the Senate last spring, took vehement issue with Neely, also a home rule supporter.

"I really believe home rule will come out on the House floor this session," Kefauver replied, "if we continue to work hard for it."

Neely, a bear for punctuality, broke precedent yesterday when he waited 13 minutes for a quorum. He made a personal trip to the Senate floor but returned empty-handed.

An eight-minute sweat for a seven-man turnout was the most he has tolerated in the past. But he cleared himself by announcing "five minutes for a quorum," otherwise no meeting would be the standing rule in the future.

Even so, it was a story of fleeting quorums during yesterday's meeting. As the first vote neared on the Kefauver amendment, Senator McCarthy was called from the commitee room. He left his proxy with Chairman Neely.

But that wasn't enough, in Neely's opinion. Throwing up his arms in despair, Neely said:

"I see much opposition to this bill. We might just as well quit." A committee aide dashed out, returned with a smiling Senator McCarthy, and business continued.

Though the measure was officially reported out of committee, Neely announced the seven absent members would be polled. A complete vote is expected to show perhaps four more in opposition.

Kefauver said he would file a minority report to the Senate emphasizing his two main arguments: 1—Home rule should come first, and 2—residents should not be held "in public ridicule" for practices not definitely "unlawful."

Terrifying Study Of a Novel Crime

By Richard L. Coe

JEALOUSY, that most pernicious of vices, is the emotional basis for a unique, tingling crime picture at the Dupont, "The Hidden Room." If you go for suspense, you'll enjoy this visitor from Britain, directed by Hollywood's Edward Dmytryck.

That suspense, in fact, makes it virtually impossible to give you a fair resume of the picture. If you go back to Dorothy Sayers' "The Corpus Delicti," you'll latch on to the wicked one's plan and you'll enjoy watching him plot a near-perfect crime.

The theme of jealousy is always one of the most enticing of theatrical emotions and you can go further back than "Othello" to find it grippingly handled. This time the pitiable husband is a doctor. His wife seems to have been in the habit of carrying on innumerable little affairs and this latest, with an American, prods him into a neat, nefarious plan that involves bombed-out buildings, a mysterious disappearance and Scotland Yard's interest in a dog.

Alec Coppel adapted the screen plan from his novel. "A Man About a Dog," and he did a neat job of it. His finale is a good indication of his dry touch; no cardboard romantic triangle this, the wife has no Hollywoodized reformation and she's as much a two-timer at the end as she was at the start.

Director Dmytryck has worked out the script with detailed precision, almost too much so, but never quite enough to annoy. We watch Robert Newton fiddle around with his dissolution chemicals, pouring them into numberless hot-water bottles which someday will play a part in his scheme. We share the author's contempt for the frivolous wife, but at the same time manage to be pleased she tosses enough clews toward Scotland Yard.

Naunton Wayne is dryly Scotland Yard as the laconic detective, Sally Gray the terrified wife and Phil Brown, who went to London to appear with Helen Hayes in "The Glass Menagerie," is the victim.

Newton, as always, has the powerful control one expects from this persuasive player and he makes the husband-doctor a neatly terrifying figure.

But it's the novelty of the story, fitting a punishment to a crime, that makes "The Hidden Room" out of the ordinary. You'll enjoy it.

"THE HIDDEN ROOM." Eagle Lion release from J. Arthur Rank produced by N. A. Bronsten. Screen play by Alec Coppel from his novel, "A Man about A Dog." Music by Nino Rota. Photographed by C. Pennington-Richards. Directed in England by Edward Dmytryck. At the Dupont.

Suicide Story Lays Murder to Klan Group

Ashville, Ala., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—A Ku Klux Klan organizer and a furniture dealer were charged with murder today because of the suicide-confession of a conscience-stricken fellow Klansman.

Sheriff Ira Davis of St. Clair County said the Rev. Alvin Horn of Talladega, Ala., an organizer for the Ku Klux Klan of Georgia, and Claude Luker, a Talladega furniture dealer, were jailed without bond on charges of murdering Charlie Hurst of Pell City last Wednesday night.

He said police were looking for two other men.

Davis said the case was broken by the confession of Roy Heath, of Talladega, who took his own life Sunday night with a shotgun.

Heath's nephew, William Heath, told police his uncle, a Ku Klux Klansman, "broke down" Saturday night and admitted he was one of the five men who attempted to kidnap Hurst.

"Bill, you're the only living person I've told this to," young Heath said his uncle told him. The next day his uncle killed himself.

Last Wednesday a gang of five men attempted to drag Hurst, 39-year-old former storekeeper, into a car parked in front of his home. Hurst yelled for help and his son, Howard, 19, rushed from the house with a loaded rifle.

"It looks like the Ku Klux," Hurst screamed to his son, who said he "froze" and could not pull the trigger. The father pulled away from the men, grabbed the rifle and began firing into the car. One of the men in the car riddled Hurst's body with bullets and wounded young Howard in the hip.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., Feb. 28.—Ray Scarborough, a church-going, God-fearing citizen of Mount Olive, N. C., who pitches for the Washington baseball team, sounded like a heretic. He likes the idea of moving the fences closer to the hitter in Griffith Stadium.

He isn't panicked at all by Clark Griffith's decision to shorten left and center fields by 19 feet despite the fact that any encroachment on the playing field is supposed to be anthema to pitchers. "I might even hit one in there myself," Scarborough laughed. "Sometimes I connect pretty well, you know."

POVICH

The rugged righthander who performed one of the top pitching feats of 1949 by winning 13 games for the last-place Nats, professes to see an advantage in the shortened playing area. "The way I figure it, more good than harm will come of it," he said.

"Griffith Stadium wasn't the pitchers' paradise everybody thinks it was," observed Scarborough. "That big area that gave the outfielders a lot of chance to roam and drag down long balls was a help sometimes, but more often it was a handicap to a pitcher."

... HE EXPLAINED it this way: "Sure, there'll be more home runs, but it's still a long wallop to that 386-foot fence and anybody who puts one in there deserves a homer. But I reckon it will help my own pitching record.

"It isn't the home runs that scare me—it's those nubbers, the Texas Leaguers that drop in front of the outfielders. With closer fences, they won't be playing so deep, and they'll catch some of those humpty-dumpty hits. Those short flies that drop in between can kill a pitcher quicker than a home run.

"If a pitcher serves up a homer, it's his own fault. The tough break comes when you throw up a good pitch and somebody lucks a hit just in front of the outfielders. It's discouraging when they get that kind of a hit on one of you're good pitches. I don't throw up any fat ones, and I hate to get beat on a good pitch."

SCARBOROUGH ISN'T afraid that the right-handed hitters of visiting clubs are going to have a picnic shooting at Washington's shortened fences. "I like to see a man up there aiming for a home run. He's easier to pitch to. Most of the home runs are hit, anyway, when they're not trying for homers and happen to connect solidly.

"Give me the fellow who's up there shooting at a fence and I can usually take care of him. If they're taking that long stride to get their power into the swing, you can usually change up on him, or do something to throw him off.

"Fellows like Bobby Doerr and Vern Stephens of the Red Sox will probably face around and shoot for the left field fence now, but that won't make any difference. They won't be any more dangerous than they were all these years when they were squaring off toward the pitcher and aiming to hit to right. In fact, I think they'll be easier to pitch to."

IN THE CASES of such as Joe Di Maggio and Ted Williams there's very little a pitcher can do to help himself, says Scarborough. "You just try to put everything you own on the ball, and then hope," he said.

When it was pointed out that Di Maggio stood flat-footed and took only an infinitesimal stride that apparently got little body power into his swing, Scarborough disagreed. "He doesn't waggle like Williams and show you all that power he has. Di Mag simply does everything so smoothly you don't notice the power he gets into a swing until you see the ball going out of the lot. Then you realize he had power.

Williams, though, has proved to be the most puzzling fellow for Scarborough to deal with, he said. "When I first pitched against him, he was on his toes, swiveling his hips and looking like an over-anxious hitter who would be easy to cross up. But I learned right away that Williams could wait for a good pitch just as long as you took to throw one."

McKinley, G. W. High Gain Metro Semifinals

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Defending Champion George Washington High of Alexandria and McKinley Tech gained the semifinals in the Metropolitan Basketball Tournament at College Park last night before a crowd of 3000.

George Washington's Presidents thumped Hyattsville, 43-26, while Tech finished fast to dump Gonzaga, 38-30.

G. W. Uses Double Pivot

G. W. with Bob Kessler and Erwin Jones, operating in a double pivot rolled up a 26-19 lead at intermission and widened its advantage in the second half. Kessler paced the Presidents with 19 points while Jones scored 10 and Smiley Moore got 8.

Warren Lytle was high for the Hornets with 13, but got little scoring assistance from the rest of his teammates.

Tech jumped into the lead and held its advantage all the way. The only time Gonzaga got close was late in the third period when the Eagles pulled up to within two points of Tech, 26-24.

Kernan Has Hot Hand

Richie Gaskell converted two charity tosses for the Trainers as the period ended and Snookie Kernan, scored seven quick points to open the last period before Gonzaga could tally.

Kernan got 11 for Tech, trailing Tony Sgro who scored 12. Gerry LeCompte paced Gonzaga with 11 while the Eagles big center, Mike Nolan, had 9 for the Eagles.

The two winners meet in the second game of Thursday night's semifinal round, following the St. John's-Eastern game.

Court Referee Loses Six Teeth

BRISTOL, R. I., Feb. 28 (AP).—Stephen Johnson, a 19-year-old automobile mechanic, was released today in $1000 bail after pleading innocent to a charge of violent assault arising from the knockout of a basketball referee at the finish of a high school playoff game last night.

Sidney F. Mackay, 44, of Warwick, R. I., the referee, lost six teeth and had four others loosened when he was slugged in the mouth and knocked out in full view of the crowd in the jammed Colt Memorial High School gymnasium here at the close of the game between Rogers High School of Newport and East Providence High School. Rogers won, 49 to 40.

Sheriffs Can't Get to 1st Base

Veeck Neatly Ducks Court Order

CHICAGO, Feb. 28 (AP).—Deputy sheriffs didn't get to first base in efforts to serve a court order on Bill Veeck, former president of the Cleveland Indians baseball club.

The order expired today. It directed Veeck to give a deposition in connection with a $1,200,000 law suit pending against him.

Attorney RAichard B. Austin said Veeck is reported to be in Tucson Ariz., but a deputy sheriff from Cook County will not go after him there. Judge Fisher had ordered Austin to file contempt of court proceedings if Veeck failed to obey the order. But Austin said he cannot do that until after Veeck has been served with the order.

12 Pitchers Ready as Griffs Open Camp Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Twelve pitchers of assorted size, shapes and ability were on the scene tonight for the opening of the Nats' spring training season tomorrow. It's when Manager Bucky Harris gets his first glimpse of the crew that is expected to pitch him out of the cellar.

Incoming trains from the North also deposited four catchers—Al Evans, Mickey Grasso, Len Okrie and Harold Keller—in camp.

Evans, the only veteran catcher in the lot, faces the necessity of a salary huddle with Clark Griffith before he dons a uniform, however. He is balking at a proffered pay cut, and will confer with Griffith tomorrow morning. He is expected to sign at the same salary he received last season.

Cuban Pair Absent

The only absentees among the group of batterymen scheduled to report by tonight are the two Cuban pitchers, Conrado Marrero and Sandalio Consuegra. Their absence at this point is no upset inasmuch as the Nats' Cuban talent characteristically reports late.

Harris, alarmed by the scarcity of veteran pitchers on his staff, can count only Ray Scarborough, Sid Hudson, Mickey Harris and Joe Haynes as seasoned performers. He is more than mildly curious about the eight rookies who will answer the ten o'clock call for the start of training tomorrow.

The club's infielders and outfielders are not scheduled to report until Sunday, but already in camp are First Baseman Eddie Robinson, and Infielders Sam Dente and Sherry Robinson. They may join the workouts tomorrow if they choose, but they do not go on the club's expense account until Sunday.

Altrock Works on Pitchers

Harris rejected the idea of two workouts a day in favor of a single drill from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. He will concentrate his own duties on the young pitchers, with Nick Altrock as his chief assistant in that department. Coaches Clyde Milan, George Myatt and Joe Fitzgerald will supervise the rest of the squad.

Up for a third trial with the Nats are the perennial pair from Charlotte, Earl Davis, a left-hander, and Bill Dozier, a right-hander.

The prize of the Charlotte crop apparently is big James Pearce, 6-foot, 6-inch right hander who would be the biggest pitcher in the majors if he makes good. With Charlotte last season, he won 10, lost 10.

Another Charlotte graduate is Howard (Dizzy) Sutherland who won 18 in that league against 10 defeats, but proved too green when the Nats brought him up late last season.

Nagy Groomed for Relief

It is from the quartet of Dick Weik, Dick Welteroth, Lloyd Hittle and Steve Nagy that Harris is looking for his chief pitching help.

Hittle had a 5-7 record with the Nats after being bought from Oakland. Welteroth will be groomed as a starting pitcher by Harris after being over-worked as a relief man in 1949. Nagy was drafted from the Coast League where he won 15, lost 14, at Harris' own recommendation.

Six days after the infielders and outfielders report, the Nats open their exhibition season at West Palm Beach against the Athletics. Harris will test his rookies in the early games . . . Mickey Grasso, from Seattle, moves right into the No. 2 catching job, as Evans' understudy. Nothing in the minor league records of Len Okrie or Hal Keller recommends them highly . . . Harris is understandably eager to get a look at Conrado Marrero, the stocky righthander from Cuba. Marrero won 25 games, lost only 8, for the pennant-winning Havana club last season.

Reds Reported Ready To Send Cooper to Cards

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—A rumor that seems almost certain to become a fact soon has it that the Cincinnati Reds are about to trade Walker Cooper, husky hard-hitting catcher to the St. Louis Cardinals for an unnamed pitcher and outfielder.

The heads of both clubs confirmed the trade talk, but neither would go into details.

C. U. Loses, 62-60; Misses Playoff Berth

Catholic University dropped a 62-60 decision to Baltimore University in the last 10 seconds last night at the American U. gym, and the Cards missed their last chance of gaining a Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament berth.

Vern Mummert's layup, his only basket of the night, gave Baltimore the eighth spot in the tournament, which opens tonight at Loyola of Baltimore. First-seeded American will meet Baltimore in the first round.

Catholic U. Coach Abe Rosenfield was unable to attend the special playoff game last night. He was suffering from a bad cold and a fever of 102 degrees. Bob Lamon, American U. player, relayed reports on the game's progress to Rosenfield over the phone.

It was a heartbreaking loss for C. U. The Cards, in an uphill battle, had forced the playoff for eighth place by thumping Towson Teachers, 61-47, Monday.

The Globetrotters led during the first three quarters by 27-24, 49-28, and 64-40. Then they began clowning, taking circus shots, lining up in football formations, and the crowd loved it.

Majors Open Training Today; Bums Already Plan for Series

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—In palm-bordered ball parks from Florida to California, 16 major league teams officially begin spring training tomorrow—their hopes as bright as the sunshine.

Hopeful words came from every camp and the most confident of all are the Brooklyn Dodgers, young and eager champions of the National League.

Dodger President Branch Rickey, in a few words he might have to eat in October, said "It is our No. 1 goal to beat the New York Yankees in the World Series."

Manager Burt Shotton presumably is taking care of the details of getting into that series, and at the Vero Beach, Fla., training grounds he said, "We will win the pennant."

Here in Tampa, base of the Cincinnati Reds, jovial Luke Sewell, their eager new manager, said, "We're not quite so choosy as the Dodgers. We'll settle for getting into the series, then take our chances on winning it."

Across the bay in St. Petersburg, spring base of the World Champion New York Yankees, Manager Casey Stengel beamed with joviality

"They'll have to catch us," he said. "This time Joe DiMaggio should be ready from the start. I have a big hunch about him. I think he'll have a great season."

Stengel's number one rival in that tingling pennant race of 1949, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Boston Red Sox, analyzed his chances as "great if we can get off to a fast start."

"Remember that 22 out of our first 30 games this season will be in our own park."

Another optimist, a man with a new lease on life is Billy Southworth, pilot of the Boston Braves whose dissension-ridden club gave him so much trouble last year he had to quit because of his health. At Bradenton, he said, "Everything is now in apple-pie order with our club and we've got the new blood we need to cause plenty of trouble."

Starting his golden jubilee year and probably his last as manager-owner of the Philadelphia Athletics at West Palm Beach, Connie Mack, as lean and erect at 88 years of age as his best-conditioned player, hoped, "This could be the year for that one more pennant I've dreamed about."

Youth Keeps Head In 160-Foot Leap Without His Skis

Iron Mountain, Mich., Feb. 28 (AP).—A 19-year-old Chicagoan accidentally jumped from Iron Mountain's 160-foot ski scaffold yesterday and lived to tell it.

William Cordes of Chicago, did the unscheduled leap during the Kawanis ski tourney.

Cordes, a member of the Windy City Ski Club, started down the slide with his skis on, but they somehow came unbuckled. He hurtled 75 feet through the air and lit on his neck as the 15,000 spectators turned their heads in horror. He bounced crazily for about 400 feet, then got up and walked away.

The only apparent injuries were bruises on the left side of his head. He returned to Chicago last night.

Bones Misses 'Home' Game

Things won't break right for the Caps.

Tonight they meet the Chicago Stags in a regular NBA game at Reynolds Coliseum, Raleigh, N. C., and Bones McKinney, one of the main pre-game attractions, won't be able to play.

McKinney, who made North Carolina basketball history playing with Durham High, N. C. State and North Carolina, is out with a fractured hand.

Bones will be honored in pre-game ceremonies

Of course, the Caps have Leo Katkaveck, former N. C. State captain, and John (Hook) Dillon, North Carolina alumnus.

Led by high-scoring Max Zaslofsky, the Stags will do battle with the Caps on two successive nights. The teams meet again here Thursday night.

Real Roses, Not the Usual Cluster of Four, Factors in Bill Brundige's Sports Career

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Roses—Four Roses or the equivalent thereof—have been blamed for ending many sports careers. But did you ever hear of roses—the kind that "by any name would smell as sweet"—being credited with starting a sports career?

Haight

Ordinarily it's difficult to believe that horticulture with its slow-moving processes and sports with its action-packed situations have anything in common.

No, the trowel and the insect sprayer just don't seem to fit in with the ball, the bat, the racket and the mashie.

But there is a connection, at least as far as Bill (WINX) Brundige is concerned. In fact he should be using "Room Full of Roses" as his theme song.

Let's start at the beginning.

Back in the early 1930's Grandfather Brundige retired and adopted as his hobby the raising of roses in the side yard of his Chattanooga home. He was successful and earned first a neighborhood and later a city-wide reputation.

One July morning, Grandpa and Young Bill, his helper, were loosening the earth around some bushes when a big car stopped at the curb and the driver came over to the fence—not unusual for the bed of roses invariably attracted passersby.

The visitor identified himself as Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Ball Club. Engel invited the elder Brundige to come out to his home and help him start a garden.

Thus began a long-friendship. Engel presented Grandpa and Bill with lifetime passes to the Chattanooga games.

The youngster not only absorbed baseball by observation, but also played the game to the hilt, hopeful some day of asking Engel to start him out on a diamond career.

Although Bill admits he wasn't the world's worst catcher, or a total loss as a football guard, his ability never quite reached the stage where he could honestly ask the Chattanooga boss for a trial.

Unknown to Bill, however, Granda and Engel did discuss the boy's future.

When Young Brundige went to work it was for Frank Lane, head of a Chattanooga radio station and a close friend of Engel.

Bill was confined to station breaks and a few commercials, for the most part, in his home town, and it was not until he accepted a job with a Nashville station that he got his first assignment as a radio reporter.

He arrived at the station, suitcase in hand. There was a big fire and Bill was rushed, along with an engineer, to the scene. His play-by play account earned him his first laurels, giving him a boost toward sports work, his objective, which he reached a short time later.

Then followed stands at Louisville, Los Angeles and San Francisco before the war. A hitch in the Army rendered his sports career dormant but after discharge he was right back on the ball.

Coming to WOL, he worked the major football games coast-to-coast for Mutual for three years. He aired the Army games with Ted Husing in 1946 and 1947; did the Yale games and was the voice for the Detroit (Pro) Lions for two seasons.

Meanwhile, Brundige slipped in a couple of National Tennis Championships at Forrest Hills as well as some major boxing and golf.

Last summer, Bill took over the afternoon sports show on WINX, folowing the Lions by plane on weekends.

Brundige, however, leaves the local scene with the close of his program on Saturday afternoon, turning the job over to Jack Rowzie.

Bill leaves for the Florida camp of the Philadelphia National League club. He has signed to do the home and road games for the Phillies.

Bill just couldn't resist the baseball offer—and no wonder.

Yankee Hill Equals 9-Year Mark in Winning Hialeah Purse

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: When Charles Town opens on Saturday, guess who will be there? Why Jockey Sammy Palumbo the boy who has ridden more winners and received more boos there than any saddle artist at that track. In fact, Palumbo probably holds a record—riding more than 500 winners on the same track. Greg (Publicity) Johnson checked 524 winners for Palumbo from 1938 to date, but Sammy's total is much higher because he has ridden there every year since the track opened in 1933. His best season by the way was in 1940 when he clicked 77 times. Palumbo is 41, according to the American Racing Manual which lists his birthplace as Flushing, N. Y. I know he was riding in 1928, because he rode the last winner on the Pimlico program the day Sonny Workman won The Preakness with Victorian. Sammy's a family man and lives just across the road from the Charles Town backstretch. Three more days.—BILL.

Victor Pays $10.30 Over 7 Furlongs

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—A track record of nine years' standing was equalled at Hialeah today when Sanford Stud Stable's Yankee Hill reeled over seven furlongs in 1:22 2-5 to win the Traveler Palm Purse. He tied the mark set by Dispose in 1941.

Yankee Hill, which was beaten in a $12,000 claimer a week ago, displayed electrifying speed, doing the first half mile in 0.45 and the six furlongs in 1.09 2-5. He was ridden by Warren Mehrtens, carried 109 pounds and paid $10.30. Sky Miracle, the best claim of 1949, was second, beaten two lengths by Yankee Hill, while Gangway took third in the field of six.

John Marsch's Roman Bath and Brookmeade Stable's More Sun, two prominent candidates for the $50,000 Flamingo Stakes on Friday, were both beaten in their winter debuts.

The race, a six-furlong event which drew a half dozen 3-year-olds, was won by J. E. Church's All At Once.

Casters Play Big Part in Outdoor Show

Fishermen will have a big part in the third annual All-American Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show coming to National Guard Armory Friday night for a 10-day run.

Active participants will be such nationally-known pro casters as George Albrecht of Ashaway, R. I., and Warren Faulkner of Boston, and a small army of amateurs representing Washington and four other cities. Also due to appear is Miss Joan Salvato of Paterson, N. J., holder of several women's national casting records.

In cooperation with the show management, the National Capital Casting Club will stage special fly and bait events daily from 5 to 7 p. m., beginning Saturday. The first will be a 5⅛-ounce accuracy tournament involving two picked teams of Woodrow Wilson High Schoon anglers, under supervision of Coach Cliff Netherton, N.C.C.C. vice president. The club will award a trophy to the winning team.

Eliminations to select N.C.C.C. teams in 5⅛-ounce accuracy and dry fly will be held Sunday, March 5 through Friday, March 10. Then on Saturday, March 11, the Capital teams will compete against clubs from Paterson, N. J.; Hagerstown, Md.; Harrisburg, Pa., and Norfolk, Va., with the League of Maryland Sportsmen, producers of the show, puttting up the winners' trophy.

Dynamite, Lemons Matched Monday On Turner Show

Boyda Leads NFL Punters, Poillon 2d

Two rookies led the National Football League last year in punting and kickoff returns.

Official figures released yesterday by the league office placed Mike Boyda, New York Bulldogs, at the head of the punting list. Dick Poillon of Washington was runnerup.

In kickoff returns, Don Doll, Detroit defensive star, was No. 1 man. Washington's Dan Sandifer, since traded to Detroit, was fifth in running back kickoffs; Eddie Saenz, ninth.

Boyda, a Washington and Lee grad, booted the ball 56 times for an average of 44.2 yards. He didn't have any kicks blocked. Poillon, second busiest kicker in the league with 66 punts, averaged 40.9 yards with one blocked.

Like DiMaggio

Jockey Boulmetis Is Always Trying

By Red Smith

Smith

HIALEAH, FLA., Feb. 28 (NYHT).—Five minutes and two martinis past the clubhouse gate, a man was telling a story about the jockey who got beat on five successive favorites. As he got down off the fifth horse, the crowd gave him one of those Arcaro-at-Jamaica salutes, their boos breaking over him in waves. (This must have been, of course, at some track other than Hialeah, where the sun shines with impartial benignity on flamingoes and parlay players, and everybody always wins $897.50 daily doubles and slops over with love.)

Anyway, the guy weighed in with his ears throbbing and, walking back to quarters with his agent muttered, "Listen to 'em. That horse shouldn't have been better than second choice anyway, probably third, and they make him the favorite and then boo me when he ain't good enough."

"Forget it," his agent said. "Don't let 'em get you. You know what a great ball player Joe DiMaggio is, he's everybody's hero. Just the same, when he gets in a slump they boo him, too."

"They boo DiMaggio?" the jock said. "Geez, and he's always trying."

THERE IS A young man down here who has been trying every day since the Hialeah meeting opened, with such eminent success that he is now out there alone in the competition for riding honors, with a comfortable lead over guys like Ted Atkinson, Joe Culmone and Doug Dodson.

He is a 100-pound package of effort named Sam Boulmetis, who grew up in horsey Baltimore but never saw a race track or a race horse until he got a job at Pimlico.

"Just never was interested, somehow," he explained. "My father, who was born in Athens, Greece, hadn't ever seen a race, either. Bcause I was small, people used to tell me I ought to be a jockey but my mother wouldn't stand for it; she wanted me to finish school."

"I was going to be a draftsman," he said, "and the last school I attended was Baltimore Polytechnic. With about six months to go, I lost interest and went to work as a printer's apprentice. People kept telling me I ought to be a jockey—I weighed 94 pounds—and finally a friend of mine that used to be a fighter around Baltimore took me out and introduced me to Fred Hannon and he gave me a job walking hots and cleaning stalls.

"Mr. Hannon took over a farm and let me go, so I kind of beat my way to Florida last winter. I had a few dollars saved. Mr. E. W. King gave me a job and at Gulfstream he gave me my first mount.

"I RODE ABOUT a dozen races in Florida with no winners. Before he went north, Mr. King bought a horse named Stepinthedark. I asked him what he wanted with the horse, and he said, 'Son, that's the horse you're going to break your maiden on.'

"Well, we went to Jamaica and I rode 35 races there and I still couldn't get a winner. I was getting disgusted again. I had seven seconds, some of 'em beaten just noses.

"We went down to Garden State where I rode two horses. Got in the money wth one of them. Then, for the first time, I got on Stepinthedark. It was the first half of the daily double. We opened at 25 to 1 and closed as the favorite. Sure enough, that was my first winner. And the daily double was the biggest Garden State ever had, about $3000."

That was last May 10. Since then, the kid has had maybe 165 winners, enough so that he quit counting a good while ago.

Buckeyes Ranked 2d In Nation

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The N. C. A. A. basketball tournament picture was clarified somewhat today with the selection of Ohio State for one berth and the decision to pick the Big Seven conference champions for another.

Ohio State's nomination for the District Four berth was a foregone conclusion. The Buckeyes, ranked second nationally and winners of the Big Ten title, officially were named today by the District Four committee, headed by Doug Mills of the University of Illinois.

Paced by Dick Schnittker, a great all-around player, the Buckeyes won the Western Conference flag with an 11-1 record and posted an 18-3 slate for the season.

The decision to pick the Big Seven champs for the District Five spot was announced by Bruce Drake, chairman of the area's selection committee and coach at the University of Oklahoma.

Normally there is a playoff between the Big Seven winner and the Missouri Valley Kings. But Bradley, No. 1 team of the Nation and Missouri Valley titlists, accepted a place in the National Invitational Tournament in New York, and the committee apparently figured that was enough.

Drake conferred by telephone with the two other members of his selection committee—Artie Eilers, Missouri Valley Conference commissioner and C. E. McBride, sports editor of the Kansas City Star.

Nebraska (8-2) currently is pacing the Big Seven race with Kansas State (7-2) right on the Cornhuskers heels. Nebraska is ranked sixteenth nationally and Kansas State twelfth.

Giermak on All-State Team

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—The highest scoring All-Virginia college basketball team in history was named today by the Associated Press.

Paced by Chester Giermak, William and Mary, the five all-star selections have tallied 2234 points. Giermak has 556 points. Behind him are Virginia's Joe Noertker, 481; Sumner Tilson, V.P.I., 466; Jay Handlan, W. & L., 406, and Dick Sayre, V.P.I., 325.

All except Tilson are holdovers from the 1949 club. Tilson, 6-foot-4 center, climbed from last year's third team.

3 Gain Southern Conference Team For Second Time

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 28 (AP).—Three players have made the Sports Writers All Southern Conference basketball team for the second year in a row.

They are North Carolina State Forwards Sammy Ranzino and Dick Dickey and William and Mary's Center Chet Giermak.

They, together with Guard Vic Bubas of North Carolina State and Center Jim Slaughter of South Carolina, made the first team announced by the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association yesterday.

The second team: Hugo Kappler and Nemo Nearman of North Carolina, John Moffat of George Washington, Dick Groat of Duke and Stan Najeway of Wake Forest.

VA Begins Crackdown On Those Who Arrive Late and Depart Early

VA: It has joined the leave-crackdown campaign. A special check is being made this week of Veterans Administration employes who are late for work or who leave their jobs before quitting time.

Each official is being required to make daily reports on employes who are tardy and those cases where tardiness is excused, and also on the employes who leave their offices an hour before official quitting time, including those who sign out on either annual or sick leave.

Employes hope the study won't result in the renewal of the bell-ringing practice at starting and quitting time. The bells were discontinued several years ago when employes protested they were treated like prisoners.

Half a dozen other agencies here also are tightening up on annual and sick leave. The crackdowns are the direct results of criticism of the leave system by members of Congress. Meantime, Senator Douglass (D., Ill.) is ready to push his plan to give all Federal workers 20 days' vacation annually and reduce sick leave from 15 to 12 days. He has introduced it as a rider to a deficiency bill.

GAO: It's a safe bet that the Senate Expenditures Committee will reject the McCarthy bill to overhaul the General Accounting Office as proposed by the Hoover Commission. Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) estimated his measure would wipe out from 50 to 75 percent of GAO's 8700 jobs. He expected hot opposition to his plan.

Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren promptly pointed out that he had already cut off about 4000 employes since the war's end. He was inclined to believe that no such big reduction could be made in the GAO staff even if the McCarthy bill were passed.

Warren explained that his office was working with the Treasury and Budget Bureau to bring about a more effective accounting system in Government. The McCarthy bill, he said, would take power away from Congress, and he testified the Hoover commission had no authority to propose reorganization of the GAO since it's a legislative agency.

INTERIOR: The CIO is backing Assistant Labor Secretary John Gibson for promotion to Interior Undersecretary. The AFL wants Assistant Interior Secretary C. Girard (Jebbie) Davidson appointed Undersecretary. The fight between the two big labor groups over the job will result in the appointment of a third person—one now outside Government.

JOBS: Civil Service today is accepting applications for these exams: tobacco inspector, $2650 to $4600 starting salaries; medical officer, $5400 to $6400; archives and library assistant, $2450 to $3100; museum aide, $2450 to $3825, and plant mounting aide, $2450 to $2650.

STATUS: New York's two Senators, Ives and Lehman, are sponsoring a resolution to blanket 50 Customs inspectors into permanent Civil Services jobs. The employes are in New York City. They have had from six to eight years of service and Customs doesn't want to lose them. A bill in the House would give them and other employes full Civil Service status. The Customs employes are represented here by Philip P. Marenberg, a lawyer, who formerly was with Civil Service.

BEP: The Treasury intends to comply fully with the recommendation of the Fair Employment Board on the Bureau of Engravng and Printing case. Its officials explain that nothing new will be done since it had planned to give the examination for apprentice plate printers all along. Meantime, there is pressure on Civil Service from Capitol Hill to hold Nation-wide tests to select plate printer apprentice. If that happens—most unlikely—most BEP employes will be frozen out of jobs.

NOTES: Several employes have been fired by the Civil Service Commission recently on morals charges . . . The wartime National Roster of Scientific and Professional Personnel may be recreated within the Office of Education . . . Federal officials and employes alike are wondering if the Attorney General will place the left-wing United Public Workers on his blacklist. Someone should send the Attorney General a copy of the CIO report which was used to expel the outfit on Communist charges.

3 Soldiers, 2 Cabmen Die In Car Crash; 1 Is Injured

GI's Auto Going 80 mph., Hits Taxi At Patapsco Bridge On Baltimore Pike

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—Three soldiers from nearby Fort Meade were killed today a few minutes after two policemen saw their car flash down Washington-Baltimore blvd. at 80 miles an hour.

The car careened into a cab, also killing an off-duty Baltimore taxi driver who was riding with a fellow worker. The cab's driver was fatally injured and another soldier was critically hurt.

The accident was on a sharp curve at one end of the Patapsco River Bridge on U. S. 1 about 6 miles southwest of the Baltimore City Limits. It is one of the worst spots on the four-lane boulevard, often called the Nation's bloodiest stretch of highway.

Dead Identified

Killed in the soldiers' car were Pfc. Ronald P. Linto, 20, of Detroit; Pfc. Kenneth J. Finger, 24, of New Bedford, Mass., and Pfc Leon H. Tessier of South Bridge, Mass.

The dead cab driver was Leo Carroll Schaeffler, 31.

Raymond W. Parks, 42, died tonight at University Hospital.

Pvt. Joseph F. Trimble, 26, of Lancaster, Pa., received a skull fracture, internal injuries, and a broken leg.

Army authorities said Linto had returned recently from a furlough in Detroit and brought back a car given him by his father.

Patrolmen W. M. Morgan and Edward Hoffman of the Baltimore County Police said they spotted the car speeding south on the highway about 2:25 a. m. They prepared to radio ahead to the Waterloo Barracks of the Maryland State Police to have the car stopped. They heard a terrific crash.

Car Skids on Curve

Driving a quarter of a mile on down the highway, they came upon the wreck. State troopers said the car apparently skidded on the curve at the south end of the bridge and careened across the highway into Parks' taxi, which was northbound in the outside lane.

Linto's car caught fire. Tessier was pinned underneath it. Schaeffler was trapped inside the cab.

Linto and Finger were holders of a plaque at Fort Meade for having the best mess hall. Linto was due for discharge in August. He had been in the Army about two years. Finger was a combat veteran and had been in the Army almost six years. Trimble is a clerk in the headquarters company.

Arlington Tax Check Forwarded

A little reminder that Arlington County is an important chunk of Virginia went out yesterday from County Treasurer John Locke Green.

Green sent Virginia Comptroller C. E. Downs a tax check for $158,571.05. In an accompanying letter, he said this brought to more than two million dollars the total Arlington has contributed to the State since December 6, 1949.

Green then wrote the comptroller: "I remember a few years ago when the balance of the State would have liked to give us back to the Indians, but I don't suppose you feel that way about us now."

He said his statement was prompted by the fact that until a few years ago Arlington was a "stepchild of the State," and received virtually no recognition from Richmond in matters of legislation or political consideration.

"They didn't think much of us then," he chuckled, "but I guess they've changed their minds."

Revenues reported to the State so far this year have already established an all-time high for the county. And Green added: "I'm going to have another half-million dollars to give them."

Stamp Cancellation Dies to Mark Sesqui

Sesquicentennial Commission officials and philatelic enthusiasts will join in a special ceremony today marking the installation of three cancellation dies which will print "National Capital Sesquicentennial 1800-1950," on all letters canceled at the Washington Post-office this year.

First letter to get the Sesqui cancellation at 10:30 a. m. at Union Station Plaza will be sent to President Truman. The second will go to King George VI of England, an avid stamp collector.

Officers to Be Installed

Newly-elected officers of the Washington Othodox Greek Catholic Chapel will be installed at 7:30 o'clock tonight at a meeting to be held at the St. John's Episcopal Parish Hall, 819 16th st. nw.

Report Clears Trade Schools For Veterans

Not Exploited, Committee Tells Commissioners

In a report to the District Commissioners yesterday after a seven-month investigation, a fact-finding committee cleared private trade schools here of exploiting veterans.

It also was learned that a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the schools' advertising methods had turned up only one instance of irregularity.

The report of the Commissioner's Committee was approved recently by only eight of the committee's 18 members, Chairman Leon Chatelain, jr., told the Commissioners. Seven members did not attend the meeting, he said.

Protest Indicated

Six of the seven numbers said last night they had not been notified of the meeting. Several indicated they would protest the action of the other members. These included representatives of labor unions, the District Apprenticeship Council, and veteran groups.

The Commissioners decided to hold up release of the report until they can determine the reaction of the absent members.

However, it was learned the report cleared the schools of charges that veterans studying under GI benefits are being given inadequate training.

Question of Demand

The other principal charge was that the 30 or so schools are turning out graduates faster than the labor market can absorb them. The committee felt this was not within its scope, it was learned.

One of the nonvoting members, James W. Lumsden, Disabled American Veterans representative, thought the adoption and filing of the report "highhanded."

Another, Robert E. Phelps, official of an auto parts company and member of the District Apprenticeship Council, said: "The whole thing stinks to high heaven."

It was chiefly at the request of the Apprenticeship Council that the investigation was made. The council seeks to place unskilled workers in apprenticeships in trades here.

Chatelain stated yesterday that all committee members had been notified of the meeting at which the report came up for a vote.

One-Act Play Tournament Opens Here

The first night of the twenty-second annual one-act play tournament sponsored by the District Recreation Department was held at the Roosevelt High School auditorium last night. The tournament will continue there on Thursday, Saturday and Tuesday at 8:15 p. m.

Last night, the American University Players put on "The Marriage Proposal," by Anton Chekov, under the direction of Dr. Severino Montano. The cast included John Spielman, Anne Seigal and Dominic Spodaro.

The second performance was by St. Peter's Social Club acting two scenes from the second act of "Dear Ruth," by Norman Krasna. Helen McNulta directed.

In the cast were Dottie Erwin, Joseph Slawta, Margaret A. Taylor, Norris Royal, Doris Cooksey, Peggy Vogt, Evelyn Roche, Gerry Hepp and Robert J. Fisher.

The final play last night was "A Night at an Inn," by Lord Dunsany. The Foundry Players, directed by Jane Plummer Rice and Mary Jane Beshers, gave it. The cast included Royce Nevels, Gay Morrison, James Elward, Marion Beasley, Earl Kadala, Phil Southard, Charles Livermore and William Ashelman.

Judges for the preliminaries are Frank L. Baer, Col. Frank A. Derouin and Mrs. Wilson Ewart. The finals will be judged on March 9 by the drama critics of Washington's four dailies.

Two Judges Approved by Committee

Miss Mary Barlow, Thomas C. Scalley Win Backing for Municipal Court

Unanimous approval was voted by the Senate District Committee yesterday for the nominations of Miss Mary C. Barlow and Thomas C. Scalley to be associate judges of Municipal Court.

The nominations now go to the Senate floor. Unanimous backing of the District committee makes Senate approval almost certain.

The nominees would fill two of the three judgeships newly created for Municipal Court by Congress last year. No nomination has yet been made for the third judgeship.

Both Miss Barlow, 32, and Scalley, 50, appeared as witnesses in a committee hearing on their nominations. The hearing preceded an executive session in which their nominations were indorsed without opposition.

Introduced by Neely

Miss Barlow was introduced to the committee by Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.). She is a native of Grafton, W. Va.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) said he had a standard question he asked all prospective Federal judges—would they resign office if permanently disabled?

After pointing out the the Municipal Court term is 10 years, Miss Barlow said she would resign if permanently incapacitated. Scalley gave the same answer to Hunt's question.

Two of the Municipal Court judges appeared to testify for confirmation of Miss Barlow, legal assistant to the 10 Municipal Court judges for 6 years.

Bar Members Approve

They were Frank H. Myers and Thomas P. Quinn. Edward B. Williams, vice president of the District Bar Association, said the general opinion of members is that she is "eminently qualified."

Godfrey L. Munter, secretary of the District Bar Association committee on judicial selections, indorsed Scalley and Miss Barlow. Also testifying for Miss Barlow was Rowland F. Kirks, dean of the National University school of law where Miss Barlow has taught for several years.

Henry N. Bliss, who served as foreman of the July term District Grand Jury last year, testified in opposition to Miss Barlow. He questioned whether her experience would have given her the mature judgment for the position.

Chairman Neely asked if he had his own candidate for the judgeships. Bliss replied he favored Mrs. Grace Kanode Llewellyn. Senator J. Allen Frear (D., Del.) said finally he felt testimony for another candidate was irrelevant "we're working on the nomination of Mss Barlow."

John A. Savage, of 1303 Fairmont st. nw., opposed the nominations, explaining he feels there are too many judges now. He said he would object to any more judges. He said his objection to the nominees was not personal.

The Senate yesterday approved the nomination of Charles F. McLaughlin to be a United States district judge for the District of Columbia.

Area DPs Given Explanation of New German Laws

Displaced persons living in the Washington area last night listened to a polylingual explanation of recently-enacted German laws which provide indemnification of victims of Nazi persecutions.

In English, German and Yiddish, more than 200 DPs at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., were informed that they could file claims for loss of life, liberty, damage to health, loss of economic advancement and property.

Forms, which must be on file by April 1 in the areas of the United States occupation zone which passed the laws, were made available and help was provided in filling them out.

The meeting was jointly sponsored by the D. C. Section of the National Council of Jewish Women, the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, and the Jewish Social Service Agency.

PUC Lawyer Hits Phone Raise Plan

Residential Users Would Bear Heavier Burden Than Those In Business, He Says

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The District Public Utilities Commission attorney yesterday criticized local telephone rate increases proposed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The company's suggested rates said PUC Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison, place a heavier burden on residential phone services than on business uses.

The firm requested formal permission of the PUC to put into effect the new and higher rate schedule March 6.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of the company, was the only witness at a morning public hearing in the District Building board room, called to consider the proposed new rates.

No Private Citizens There

Not one private citizen appeared to support or protest the company's suggested telephone tariff which, if approved, will mean an average 50-cent-a-month higher telephone bill for District residents and most businesses.

The rate schedule is the firm's plan for apportioning among its approximately 660,000 customers the $2,250,000 increase in rates authorized by the PUC last Monday.

Harrison characterized the ratio of increases between residential and business use as "out of balance." Under questioning, Howard said the different classes of service would be boosted by the following percentages under the proposed increase:

Residential service, 12.3 percent; Government, 13.6 percent; other business (commercial), 7.5 percent, and combined government and business, 9.4 percent.

9.7 Average

The overall increase would average 9.7 percent, Howard testified.

The company spokesman countered that the ratio of increases between services as now proposed almost exactly gees with revenue received from the different classes of subscribers.

Good rate-making, Howard added, cannot be developed through a strictly statistical approach.

The company based its proposed rate plan upon these four general principles, Howard explained: the rates should produce the required revenue; they should invite more business and favorable "customer reaction;" they should maintain the proper relationship between services and; they should make for economical company operation.

Harrison singled out the proposed $2.75 rate for two-party residential service as being particularly "out of line." Present rate is $2.25. Harrison hinted a $2.50 fee might be fairer and implied the $6 individual business line rate might be hiked to $6.75 or $7 to bring in the equivalent amount of revenue. The company has proposed a $6.50 individual business levy.

John Kirby, representing the Bureau of Federal Supply, noting the Federal Government is slated to foot the highest increase, suggested that all classes of subscribers receive a flat 9.7 percent increase.

The PUC took the tariff plan under advisement.

Silver Spring Plans Approved For New Hospital

Plans for a 1½-million-dollar hospital to be located in Silver Spring, Md., were approved last night by the construction board of trustees of the Silver Spring Hospital Association.

The executive committee of the association was directed to prepare a bill for presentation to the Montgomery County Council in May, asking for approximately one million dollars from the profits of the county's liquor stores.

Another $500,000 will be asked from the State under the terms of the Hill-Burton Act, according to Ralph D. Boyd, trustee chairman of the association.

Fried Oyster Supper

The Women's Society of Christian Service of Ashton Methodist Church, Ashton, Md., will serve a fried oyster supper in the church basement from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Sense of Uselessness Called Greatest Tragedy of Old Age

The one great tragedy of old age is the "awareness of uselessness," Dr. Edward J. Stieglitz told the general practice section of the D. C. Medical Society last night.

The answer to the tragedy lies in education of adults for old age similar to the education of youth for adulthood, he said.

"People must be taught to retire to something rather than to retire from something," Dr. Stieglitz told the general practitioners.

Dr. Stieglitz spoke on "The Challenge of Longevity" in the auditorium of the society's headquarters at 1718 M st. nw.

It's quite a challenge, the speaker warned, and the youth of today should accept it. "When they get old, there are going to be so many of them that the competition for a place in the sun is going to be tremendous," he said.

In 1900, Dr. Stieglitz said, the average life expectancy in America was only 47, and only 17 percent of the population was over 45. In 1980, he added, the life expectancy will exceed 70 and an estimated 40 percent of the population will be over 45.

Arbitrary retirement, Dr. Stieglitz characterized as "stupid." Anything to prevent abrupt leisure will help the aged. The wife of the retiring man is as critical a problem as the man himself. The wife must have more alternatives, he said, than "building her retiring husband a den or letting him growl all over the house.

Mrs. Keleher's Niece Divorced From Mate Who Beat Her Pals

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A District Court audience was kept in laughs and gasps yesterday as pretty Mrs. Joan Langlotz, 21, won a limited divorce from her bull-fiddler husband.

Mrs. Langlotz, mother of two small sons, was a star witness in the recent divorce trials of John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, the gambler, and his estranged wife, Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher. Mrs. Langlotz, who is Mrs. Keleher's niece, told Judge Edward M. Curran the story of her own marital tribulations.

Mrs. Langlotz accused her 230-pound, 6-foot 1-inch husband, Ronald, 24, of knocking out a front tooth, frightening off a policeman and neglecting her in favor of his automobile.

The husband countered that she was too easily induced to "do things" that didn't befit a married woman. Also, he said he found it "boresome" to find himself always beating up her boy friends.

Judge Curran ended the testimony when he banged down the divorce file and awarded Mrs. Langlotz custody of her two children, a limited divorce for cruelty and $60 a month alimony.

Mrs. Langlotz began by pushing back her red-brown hair and saying that she wed when she was 16 years old and that the most unusual thing about the marriage was that her husband seldom spent protracted periods at home with her. She said that it was his custom to sleep elsewhere but to visit her from time to time.

She said that from time to time "Buzzie," her husband, would "haul off and sock me." She said she decided to call it quits when in 1948, he knocked out one of her front teeth.

Mrs. Langlotz testified she lives off whatever money she can get from her estranged husband, plus the largess of relatives and $40 a month that she obtains from "relief" from the Board of Public Welfare.

Denies Beating Wife

On this, she said she must feed and care for herself and children, maintain her $55.50 apartment at 3221 Connecticut ave. nw., pay her telephone bill and the replacement for the broken tooth.

Langlotz denied that he beat his wife, but said he left her when "I hit her boy friends so often it became boresome."

Langlotz said that for the past several years he has done little other than act as a curb-service waiter, and go to school under the GI bill of rights.

Now he is studying to play the bass violin but isn't far enough "advanced" to perform in an orchestra. Also, he helps his mother and grandmother, he said, teach children to tap dance.

"What do you do?" asked Curran.

"I help them, well, you know, I help them make archways, when two of the children stand opposite each other and—"

"That's enough," said the judge.

2 Masked Men Make $125 Run At Home Plate

Two men—one wearing a black patch over an eye and the other with a Halloween mask—gained $125 by entering the Home Plate Liquor Store, 801 V st. nw., last night, the owner told police.

Samuel Schiffman, 51, of 5818 3d pl. nw., owner of the store, lost the sum in the third holdup there. He described the latest affair to police:

A man with a black patch over an eye—he couldn't remember which eye—came in and ordered some "sneaky pete" wine. Schiffman dispatched his helper, William Richardson, to the back room for the job and looked over some bills.

He looked up for a moment, right into a black gun held by the man with the black patch. Schiffman raised his hands and Richardson, on returning, followed suit.

Meanwhile, the gun-wielder summoned a man standing outside the store. He entered wearing a black mask. The masked man leaped over the counter, went through Schiffman's pockets, finding $2 in change which he tossed on the floor.

He fished $125 in bills out of the cash register and then the pair dashed out toward 9th st.

Police flashed a lookout for a Negro, about 40, 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, wearing a felt hat and a dark, shabby overcoat; and for another about 25, 5 feet 6 inches, 150 pounds, wearing a felt hat, sports jacket and black leather gloves.

Body of Man, Missing Month, Found in River

The body of Henry E. Brooks, 72, of 1257 4th st. sw., missing from his home since January 30, was found yesterday along the seawall of the Potomac River near Fort McNair.

Harbor police recovered the body after a citizen phoned that he sighted it lying along the wall. Brooks' daughter, Mrs. Olivia Rousey, who lived with her father and had reported him missing, said he had not been seen since his disappearance on the 30th.

Lenten Film Showing

The first in a Lenten series of films on incidents from the Bible will be shown Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Central Branch Young Men's Christian Association, 1736 G st. nw. It is entitled "A Voice in the Wilderness."

Virus Short Of Epidemic, D. C. Health Aides Say

High Incidence Of Colds Reported; Counties See No Cause for Alarm

District health officials yesterday spot-checked Washington and reported an "unusually high" incidence of colds and perhaps mild influenza.

The very nature of the ailments makes it difficult to learn their extent, said Dr. Carl C. Dauer, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

"But I certainly wouldn't say we're having an epidemic," he declared.

At the same time, health officers in nearby Maryland and Virginia saw no cause for alarm. Across the Potomac River, the Virginia health officers reported an "apparent decline" in the number of new upper respiratory infections within their counties. In Maryland, the health officers for near-Washington areas reported nothing unseasonal.

Despite an apparent tapering-off of the ills in Alexandria, hospital authorities there invoked new rules for visitors, to protect obstetrical cases.

Van C. Adams, administrator of Alexandria Hospital, said: "Visitors in the bedrooms of new mothers are limited to the patient's husband and her own mother; they will wash their hands under hospital supervision, wear gauze facemasks, and refrain from sitting on the patient's bed."

District Health Officer Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger ordered the local spot-check following numerous queries on the extent of "the flu" in this city. Last week Public Health Service scientists at Bethesda, Md., reported they had isolated an "influenza-like" virus from samplings of Arlington patients in a school outbreak there.

The District check showed, Dr. Seckinger said, that absenteeism at local schools was 7 percent above seasonal normal at the senior high schools; 2 percent above normal at the junior high schools, and 8 per cent above normal at the elementary schools.

About 90 per cent of the school absences were attributed by the District Health Officer to "upper respiratory infections, possibly some influenza."

New Evidence May Free Wife In Shooting

Luray, Va., Feb. 27 (Spl.).—Page County Commonwealth's Attorney I. R. Dovel revealed today that evidence has been uncovered that may clear Mrs. Barbara Parks of murder charges in the death of her husband.

While Dovel would not reveal what this evidence is, he said it "indicates that death could have been accidental as Mrs. Parks has contended."

He added that both he and Sergt. C. A. Seal, Virginia State policeman who has been investigating the case, believe the information "will entirely justify a dismissal of the charges against Mrs. Parks."

(Dovel late last night denied an Associated Press report that he would recommend dismissal of the murder charge against Mrs. Parks.

Parks, 39-year-old former Army captain who had been a Japanese prisoner of war three years, was found shot to death at his "plantation" home early the morning of February 19. Mrs. Parks, 26, hysterically notified a neighbor her husband was shot "in an accident."

Since then, and despite conflicting stories to authorities, she has maintained her innocence. She was formally charged with murder last Wednesday morning, and a few hours later in the day was released under $10,000 bond.

Dovel said the slim, red-haired woman would have to face a preliminary trial March 14 before Trial Justice John H. Booton. Evidence obtained by "all officers working in this case" would be placed before the judge at this haring, Dovel said, leaving the court to "dispose" of the charge.

Dovel reported that Sergeant Seal and Sheriff Abram Brubaker have completed their investigations.

He indicated that the new evidence which may free Mrs. Parks may have come either from the office of the chief medical examiner in Richmond or from the FBI in Washington.

The death weapon, a .32 caliber automatic, was sent to the FBI for laboratory examination. Dovel's statement mentioned that Mrs. Parks "has denied from the start any handling of the weapon."

Wittenberg College Head to Speak Here

The Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship will hear Dr. Clarence R. Stoughton, president of Wittenberg College, at their eighth annual dinner in Atonement Lutheran Church, 2 Rhode Island ave. ne., at 7 p. m. Thursday.

Dr. Stoughton, formerly president of Wagner College, New York, is the first layman to be named president of a Lutheran college. Formerly he was executive secretary of the Lutheran Laymen's Movement for Stewardship, of the United Lutheran Church in America.

Council Tables Sunday Beer, Wine Sale Ban

The Alexandria City Council last night voted 5 to 2 to table indefinitely a law which would prohibit sale of beer and wine between 12 midnight Saturday and 6 a. m. Monday. Sponsor was Councilman R. Samuel Luckett, who said church people advocated the law.

The tavern operators, who packed the council chambers, did not have to raise their voices because the motion to table the law precluded debate or discussion.

In other business, council passed on first reading a motion giving Alexandria Hospital $25,000 to help pull it out of the red.

Councilman Bendheim, chairman of the hospital committee, said the hospital has $27,862 owed it for bills, and a $12,513 operating deficit for 1949.

Council also approved on first reading the spending of $1000 to pay court costs resulting from taking delinquent taxpayers into court.

The council authorized City Attorney V. Floyd Williams to hire private attorneys on a fee basis, to try to collect some of the city's approximately $250,000 in delinquent personal property and real estate taxes.

Heart Ailment Held Cause of Boy's Death

Wesley Franklin Taylor, 15, apparently healthy high school athlete who died unexpectedly Monday, suffered from a rheumatic heart condition, an autopsy disclosed yesterday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said this condition brought on acute heart failure. He issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

A sturdy Bell Vocational High School student, the boy was a football player and skating enthusiast. His family said he had not complained of illness.

Wesley's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, chief telephone operator at the Roosevelt Hotel, returned to the family home, at 2129 18th st. nw., and found her son in convulsions. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Bribe Offer Importance Discounted

The $5000 bribe offered a Board of Education member was made to Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger to vote for the transfer of Central High School to use by Negro students.

It was learned yesterday that Mrs. Magdeburger was unable to get the name of the person who made the offer by phone several days ago.

Mrs. Magdeburger, a member of a board committee considering the transfer of Central, refused to comment on details of the offer.

The information was turned over to United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who has launched an investigation. He also refused comment.

School officials confirmed that the bribe offer had been made but discounted its importance.

The board is scheduled to vote on the Central question at its next scheduled meeting March 8.

The buildings and grounds committee, of which Mrs. Magdeburger is a member, voted several weeks ago to transfer Central. However, at the last meeting of the board, the committee failed to report out its decision.

Mrs. Magdeburger asked that further consideration be given to the effect of the transfer on Central's large recreational program. She also called for a report on a suggestion made by another member of the board that Eliot Junior High School instead of Central be used to provide relief for the overcrowded Negro Cardozo High School.

Royal Visit 'Unofficial'

Blair House Red Carpet Awaits Prince Bernhard

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE RED CARPET at Blair House will be rolled out for Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, who is to arrive in Washington on March 7. The President and Mrs. Truman will entertain for the royal visitor on Wednesday, March 8, at a luncheon to which twelve guests have been invited.

With an entourage of seven, the Prince has been flying his own plane around the West Indies and South America. He sailed from Holland on an aircraft carrier the end of December, and his last flight was from Curacao, Dutch West Indies, to Mexico City. The Prince will fly to Washington in his DC-3 on the seventh.

Accompanying the Prince are W. van Tets, Netherlands Minister to Czechoslovakia; J. Thomassen, private secretary; Baron C. W. T. van Boetzelaer, NRN; F. Steinmetz, NRN; Maj. C. C. Geertsema, A. D. C.; Dorhout Mees Eisink, private detective of the royal family, and Flight Major Sonderman.

Embassy Will Entertain

AFTER A VISIT here of three days, as the house guest of the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens, the Prince will fly to Canada for an official visit. His visit here will be unofficial. A dinner for the Prince will be given at the Netherlands Embassy on March 8, and a reception at the embassy will follow at 10 p. m.

The Truman luncheon on March 8 will be held either in the Blair House or adjoining Lee House, and there will probably be music furnished by a quartet from the Marine Band Orchestra. As always on state occasions, either the Woodrow Wilson china or the Franklin Roosevelt china will be used.

First Lady Will Attend Concert

A GOLD BAND rims the Woodrow Wilson set, while the Roosevelt china is bordered with little roses on a blue band. The roses appear in the Roosevelt coat of arms, and were suggested by the late President as something distinguishing the administration in which the china was purchased.

The St. Louis Symphony concert on Saturday, March 11, will be attended by the First Lady. The concert will be held at 8:30 p. m. at Constitution Hall. Mrs. Truman is serving as honorary chairman of the sponsors' committee for the orchestra.

PARRY-PHRASING

What Appealed to the Artist Also Appealed to the Judges This Time

By Ellen Buell Parry

THE APARTMENT was below street level. No north light (the traditional artist's necessity) was in sight. No cluttered studio atmosphere, either; no old canvases stacked against the walls. His paintings were nicely hung.

Yet the studio's owner, Samuel Bookatz, recently won one of 10 top prizes in the Hallmark contest, out of over 10,000 entries. His winning design for a Christmas card was a semi-abstract painting of a cathedral in luminous stained glass hues.

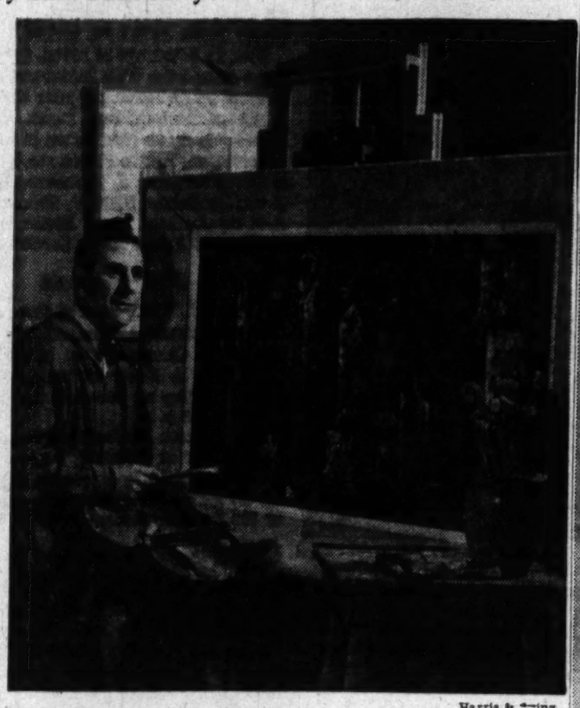
In many other ways, Bookatz failed to conform to my previous views about artists. As I talked to him in his neat, four-room studio apartment at Que Street Gardens in Georgetown, the broad-shouldered brunette painter looked more like Paul Douglas of the movies than a pallid aesthete.

I asked him how he happened to choose such an unusual treatment for a Christmas card. His cathedral, its spires suggested rather than fully delineated, appears as a mosaic of jewel-like fragments of color.

"I started work on an entirely different theme, one I thought would appeal to the public," he told me. "Suddenly I stopped work on that, and decided to paint what would appeal to me." What appealed to him also appealed to the judges as it turned out. The public can test their decision when the Hallmark show opens Saturday at the Corcoran Gallery.

I MANAGED, by continual questioning for two hours, to worm out of this modest bachelor of 40 the fact that he sold newspapers for 15 years on one street corner in Cleveland (starting at the ripe age of 7) to earn tuition for his art training at the Cleveland School of Art. After that he was awarded scholarships to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, another for two years travel and study abroad. He had a one-man show in Paris; also exhibited in Rome.

For five years during World War II, he served as official naval artist for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, coming out with the rank of commander. The most interesting work he did for the Navy was making sketches from which plastic surgeons reconstructed men's faces. Later he painted murals, and portraits of naval medical officials. These portraits are being collected for permanent hanging at Naval Hospital. Fifty of his paintings are currently on view at a one-man show at the Washington Hebrew Congregation.



Harris & Ewing

SAMUEL BOOKATZ

Bookatz, who looks more like a rugged movie actor than the conventional conception of a painter, works in a studio that is below street level and therefore without the usually essential north light. As a boy he hustled newspapers on a street corner in Cleveland, used his savings to pay for art lessons

Although Mr. Bookatz is quiet, and unusually modest considering the many honors that have come to him in his 40 years, he doesn't hesitate to paint an entire picture before a large television audience on his program every Tuesday from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Last week he was called to New York to be interviewed for this year's Prix de Rome.

ROBERT F. GATES of Vienna, Va., who like Bookatz won a prize of $750 in this contest, says his picture of a small florist shop, with a few wreaths, plants and Christmas trees piled around, represented Yule to him because "I spent most of my Christmas vacations working in my grandfather's florist shop."

Edmund R. Demers, also of Washington, won an honorable mention, and the second most popular vote in the New York showing. He thought a Christmas card should have a religious theme, and entered a stylized representation of Joseph, Mary and baby Jesus, emphasizing the geometric patterns formed by the folds of their garments. He is a student and lecturer at Catholic University.

Many other top contemporary artists in America will show their ideas for Christmas cards in the forthcoming show.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Hiding Evidence of Playing With Fire, Child Started Blaze That Made Family Homeless 22 Years Ago; She Still Hides Secret and Suffers

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 22 years I have carried a guilty secret, unknown to anyone. I am 27, one of seven children, and when I was 5 years old I set fire to our home. It was a lovely bungalow, furnished beautifully and built in part of pine wood. It was in the country with no fire department nearby, and our possessions and my parents' security were burned to ashes.

My father built again, an even finer house, but it was mortgaged to the hilt and we lost it, too, during the depression. With us children to support, and these setbacks, my father was ruined financially and a thousand other ways. My parents' desperate efforts to keep us together and give us the necessities of life during the depression really "broke" both of them.

Nowadays when I go back on a visit with my dear husband, my father will often say, "When the house burned, that's what ruined me." Never did I think I could ever write this, and I still don't believe I could ever speak face to face to anyone about it. When people are talking to me, even my husband whom I dearly love, I keep thinking, "How would you feel if you knew the thing I have done?" I can't get it off my mind.

Broods to Brink of Mental Breakdown

WHEN I WAS 5, my afternoon chore was to watch my baby sister. Mother was in the kitchen and I was in the bedroom with the baby. We had an open fireplace and to amuse myself I ignited a broom straw as I had seen a cousin do, and waved it to and fro to make a pattern of light. As the straw burned out, I thought a bigger light would be prettier, so I ignited a dress belt—and in the midst of this fun I heard mother coming. Knowing I'd be punished if discovered playing with fire, I hastily opened a closet and stuffed the belt between the folds of a pile of quilts. In minutes the house was ablaze.

My parents are old and sick now, without the financial security they would have had if it weren't for me. My brother lives at home and takes care of them, but dad's spirit is so hurt. It bothers him that he has worked all his life and hasn't one cent of security. Imagine how I feel. I think sometimes I can't bear myself anymore. I am very miserable and it seems that I am living a lie continually.

How can I keep from hating myself so? Sometimes I think my mind is going to snap. I have a wonderful husband, a home, much to be thankful for, but I can't get close to people and have few friends for I keep thinking I ought to be isolated and ignored. I need expert help, but as I cannot afford psychiatry I am turning to you for advice—but please don't condemn me. That's what I am most afraid of, that everybody, and especially, my brothers and sisters, would despise me for bringing hardships on them. I am almost trembling now that it is out. Please answer soon. V. B.

Self Indictment Is Unjustified

DEAR V. B: When you were 5, you were carrying intangible burdens unsuited to your years. You were expected to be "responsible"—not only for your own good behavior, but for the baby's safety and the mother's welfare, insofar as you could help her.

No doubt you had moments of knowing what was expected of you along these lines, and moments of really applying yourself to oblige. But for the most part you were, emotionally, completely a child at 5 years of age, hence incapable of being "responsible" in the sense of acting with adult prudence, or in conformity to past instruction, when on your own in a tempting situation, or in a crisis where you felt threatened.

You innocently demonstrated personal need of supervisory care in playing with fire to amuse yourself (as bored but inventive children have done since time immemorial), and in hiding the evidence to avert a spanking, another reflex action in early childhood that is valid and healthy. But because you'd been harnessed to notions of being "big," and infused with feelings that thoughtless disobedience was a major sin, deserving of astracism and other awful punishments, you privately assumed full moral responsibility for the house burning down, and proceeded from there to feel personally culpable for your parents' bad misfortune in every respect.

Children, Property, Need Alert Guardians

HAD YOUR parents known then how you started the blaze, they might have blamed you as cruelly as you blamed yourself. Or they might have had the good sense to acknowledge their own mistakes—such as having open fires around children, neglecting insurance, etc.,—and to have comforted you kindly and assuaged your excessive guilt feelings, if you had poured out your distraction to them.

The loss of the home was a great misfortune, yes; but your parents were guardians of the property, also the guardians of your 5-year-old actions then. And if they were so off guard as to permit conditions in which you could play with fire while tending the baby, then obviously they, and not you, were accountable for the disaster. The damage was due to their lack of foresight, not to "wickedness" in you,—as any impartial adult would have told you from the first. You were no more "to blame" for it than for your father's overspending in replacing the house, or for the industrial depression that followed later.

So much for the fire. The neurosis it sparked is your present problem. It has been gathering volume and feeding on new material ever since, I suppose. But maybe, beginning here, you can unravel it and gradually see your way out of it, without psychiatric help if you can't afford it. Good luck to you. M. H.

Deadline for Entries April 15

On Your Mark! Get Set! Go! Post Sewing Contest Starts Today

By Peggy Preston

ALL set to go? Got the scissors sharpened, the pattern on the cutting board, and the fabric piled near by?

We're talking, of course, to all the amateur sewing enthusiasts who are entering The Washington Post Sewing Contest. For today's the day the competition officially gets under way. And between now and April 15 entrants must complete the garment or garments they intend to enter in the contest.

It promises to be a hectic, as well as a happy six weeks for some of those who plan to compete. One of our readers in Silver Spring, for instance, writes as follows:

This Reader Is Enthusiastic

"I THINK it's wonderful that The Washington Post is sponsoring this contest. So many of us homemakers sew and sew until it becomes accepted as just one of the many things that mother does, without a bit of glamour to it." M. G.

Some of the questions asked by Mrs. G. and other readers, with the answers, are printed here.

Q. In what group would I enter a basically tailored dress, with softly tailored cape?

A. In this case the garment would be entered in Division No. 2—Tailored Dress.

Q. Can personal touches, such as embroidery, be added to a garment if a standard pattern is used?

A. Yes. You may add such touches yourself. In the case of covered buttons, buttonholes, hemstitching and belts, you may have professional assistance.

Q. What are the prizes offered in the contest?

A. There are 16 cash awards. Eight first prizes of $50 each and eight second prizes of $20 each. Other prizes, not cash, will be announced later.

Q. May an entry blank be clipped and sent to some one out of town who would like to enter the contest?

A. Yes. But it is essential that the blank, fully filled out, be basted to the garment when it is sent in.

Q. May parts of different patterns be used in the Standard Pattern divisions?

A. Yes. Parts of various patterns may be used in one garment, and if more than one pattern is used, the numbers of each should be listed under "Pattern Number" on entry blank.

Real Treat for Winners

ALL garment entries should be mailed or brought to The Washington Post Sewing Contest headquarters before or on April 15. Judging, by a panel of competent local judges, will take place April 24, and the first-prize winning garment in each of the eight classifications will then be shipped to New York for entry in the national contest.

If a Washington contestant should win one of the eight prizes in the national competition she, or he, (for the boys are welcomed in this contest as well as the girls) has a real treat in store. There will be a three-day visit to New York with all expenses paid, with accommodations at the Waldorf-Astoria. A program of theater, dinner and luncheon parties will be climaxed with a fashion show featuring the winning garments. And then, perhaps best of all, a cash prize of $100.

Chestnut Paste Proves an Elusive Commodity in District Stores but Anne Tells How to Make Your Own

DEAR ANNE:
Can you please print the recipe for Mont Blanc, using chestnut paste. And can you tell me where in town I can find canned chestnut paste?
MRS. A. WATERSTON.

I've called a whole string of fancy groceries and shops selling foreign foods and failed to find any stocking chestnut paste.

However, there are directions for making your own paste in this recipe for Mont Blanc from "Tante Marie's French Kitchen," by Charlotte Turgson (Oxford).

Mont Blanc

Take a pound of chestnuts and, with a sharp-pointed knife, make an X on the flat side of each nut. Plunge the nuts in rapidly boiling water and boil 10 minutes. Remove from the water and, while they are still hot, remove the shell. Scald 2 cups milk. Add 1 cup sugar and cook chestnuts in milk 40 minutes. Force through food mill or strainer.

Heap chestnuts on dessert platter in shape of pyramid. Smooth sides with moistened blade of a knife and decorate with sweetened whipped cream forced through a pastry tube. Serve warm or cold.

DEAR ANNE:
Would you kindly recommend as to the proper type of wax or dressing which should be used on an alligator purse? The purse has been carried for a year, with no preservative measures taken. H. G. H.

You can use either a good leather dressing or a special leather wax to preserve your 'gator bag. Frequent cleansings with saddle soap are advisable as dust and perspiration from the hands deteriorate the leather.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me how to mend a tear in the artificial leather top of our baby buggy? T. G.
Takoma Park, Md.

You can mend this tear on the reverse side of the leather by applying a patch. Use a scrap of stout material and stick it to the fabric with a strong household cement or some form of flexible glue. The raveled ends of the tear should be worked underneath so that they are secured by the patch.

DEAR ANNE:
I am a housewife and have my hands in water a good deal of the time. I would like to know where I could get a pair of rubber gloves that woud reach to my elbows? MRS. EDMONDSON.
Washington 20, D. C.

You could buy a pair of long rubber gloves, such as doctors wear, at one of the firms listed under "Surgical Supplies" in the yellow phone book. These are considerably more expensive than the ordinary rubber gloves sold in drugstores and housewares departments. It all depends on you as to whether this additional outlay would be worthwhile.

DEAR ANNE:
The ivory keys on our piano are quite yellow. Is there anything that can be done to whiten them? D. B. B.

Yellow stains on the surface of ivory piano keys can be removed by wiping with alcohol and powdered chalk or peroxide. When from age piano keys have yellowed throughout, there is no process that will whiten them. Yellowing from this cause can be checked by leaving the keyboard exposed to light.

Indonesia's First Ambassador Makes U. S. Platform Debut

Indonesia's first Ambassador to the United States, Ali Sastroamidjojo, yesterday asked the Western World to help the people of South Asia bring their social revolution to fulfillment "in the right way."

Making his first public address in this country, the new Ambassador spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

Ambassador Sastroamidjojo pointed out the similarity of the ideals of the new United States of Indonesia and the United States of America, as expressed in their respective constitutions, and said that "by championing the ineluctable and impending social revolutions of the countries of south Asia, the United States of America stands its strongest chance of keeping them in the right paths."

Indonesia hopes for financial, technical and educational assistance to help it through the transition period. "Social distortions and tensions built up in a dependent country which could not manage its own affairs" led to "disintegrating societies" which must now be formed in a new pattern, the Ambassador explained.

In reply to questions, the Ambassador said that the influence of the United States in Indonesia would depend on the attitude of the United States. He declined to comment on the recognition of the Bao Dai Government in Indo-China by this country, saying only that his government has not recognized it.

He acknowledge that women had played a large part in the freedom movement in Indonesia which led to the establishment of an independent country on December 27, 1949. Women have equal rights with men, and in some areas of the 3000-island archipelago that makes up Indonesia, women have more rights, he admitted. "My wife does not come from those parts of Indonesia," he added with a smile.

The Indonesian people do not bear illwill toward the Dutch people from whom they won their independence, the Ambassador said.

What Are Government Goals Today?

"Our Growing Government and Individual Freedom" will be discussed at the D. C. League of Women Voters ninth annual All-Day School on Friday. Sessions will begin at 10:30 a m. in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler.

Arthur M. Schlesinger, Harvard professor and historian, and Dr. John Powell, author and educator, will headline the morning and afternoon sessions, respectively. With the general title "Our Growing Government and Individual Freedom," Mr. Schlesinger will trace the historic goals which our country has always pursued throughout its history. A panel discussion on "These Goals Take Money" will enlist Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) and Representative Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.) Dr. Louis N. Young, D. C. board member and author of the recently published "Understanding Politics: A Practical Guide for Women," will be moderator.

An innovation in this year's school will be the presentation of the first league citation to be given to "a person who has effectively demonstrated his sense of responsibility as a citizen of Washington." The selection of the candidate, who may be either a man or a woman but must be a resident of the metropolitan area, will be made by the board of directors.

Tickets for the All Day School may be obtained from the league office, 1129 Vermont ave. nw., or by calling Republic 5778.

Tonic Exercise Banishes That Dull, Middle-Aged Feeling

By Ida Jean Kain

THE WHITE QUEEN told Alice in Wonderland that sometimes she believed in as many as six impossible things before breakfast. She said that all it took was practice. Well, let's practice believing in just one impossible thing . . . that exercise will help to keep you from overeating! And it doesn't necessarily have to be exercise before breakfast—although a few stretches start the day right, for stretching is a powerful stimulus to circulation.

There is a direct relationship between toned muscles and a strong will. Again it's a matter of energy. Toned muscles increases energy, determination and confidence.

The most effective kind of calisthenics for toughening the will are exercises which tone the four pairs of muscles forming the abdominal girdle. The beauty of it is, just a little exercise can keep these muscles toned . . . if backed up with the excellent posture rule of pulling up-and-in. Don't just pull in, lift! Pull up, and hold snugly.

The starting position in beginning abdominal exercises should prevent strain and help counteract gravity . . .

Position: Lying on back on floor, knees bent, soles of feet flat on floor. This is a safety position which prevents all strain. To pull shoulders into line, have arms out at side on floor at shoulder level, elbows bent, forearms back on floor L-shape.

Movement: Contract strongly with the abdominal muscles, pulling snugly up-and-in. Then lift hips just slightly off floor, holding the up-and-in pull. Lower hips to floor, pull in again, raise hips. Repeat six times, later more.

Position: Lying on back on floor, left knee bent, sole of foot flat on floor, right leg straight down. Left arm should be down at side, right arm back on floor overhead.

Movement: Contract with the abdominal muscles and get the small of the back as flat against the floor as possible. Now s-t-r-e-t-c-h all along the right side, pushing down with the right foot and up with the right hand. Keep small of back on floor. Stretch three times, smoothly. Reverse position of legs and stretch along the left side, 3 to 6 times. Gradually increase count.

Position: Lying on back, arms back on floor overhead, legs straight down.

Movement: Get a firm grip on middle muscles, swing the arms forward and come up to a sitting position . . . without lifting feet from floor. Then go on over and touch fingers to toes. Make it one continuous motion. Lower trunk to starting position and repeat. Take it easy at first, three times may be enough. Gradually increase count. If you can't keep your feet on the floor anchor them under a heavy piece of furniture.

The up-and-in pull must be held throughout each exercise—otherwise the action is performed by muscles other than the abdominals.

This tonic routine not only banishes the middle-age spread, but the middle-age feeling . . . happy day!

D. C. Broker Opens Office In Alexandria

By S. Oliver Goodman

Johnston, Lemon & Co., Washington investment house, will open its first branch office today at 134 North Pitt st. in Alexandria, Va., under the management of Robert G. Whitton.

Whitton

It will be the first time that Alexandria, a city of about 60,000 population, has had a brokerage office offering complete investment facilities.

Whitton, president of the Mortgage Finance Corp., has had 28 years of banking experience and at one time was associated with the First National Bank of Alexandria and the Burke & Herbert Bank & Trust Co. He is active in Alexandria civic and business affairs and is treasurer of the Alexandria Library Board and a former president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce.

Associated with him in the new Johnston, Lemon branch will be his sister, Miss Alice H. Whitton, and E. Wallace Schreiner, all natives of Alexandria.

The Washington investment firm has as its New York correspondent Carl Loeb, Rhoades & Co., which is a member of all principal exchanges.

MORE RECORDS: Washington bank clearings have set two more records, indicating continued high level of business activity. February check transactions totaled $301,844,866, a new high for that month and a gain of $5,298,701 over the same 1949 month. For the first two months, cumulative clearings aggregated $673,179,320, also a peak for that period and a gain of 93 million dollars over the like period last year.

PEPCO NET UP: January net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. and subsidiary totaled $448,830, an increase of 4.33 percent over the same period last year. Operating revenues of $3,243,445 were up 5.1 percent while operating expenses held virtually unchanged. The above report gives effect to the merger of Braddock Light & Power Co. into the parent firm on December 31, 1949. Hereafter, a Pepco spokesman said, monthly operations will be reported on a consolidated basis and the comparison with last year also will be on a consolidated basis.

WARNING: The Communists' policy "is aimed at coaxing, taunting and forcing the United States over the brink of financial disaster," T. Coleman Andrews warned last night. Addressing the local Controllers Institute at a dinner meeting in the Carlton Hotel, Andrews urged opposition to all forms of excessive Government spending and a sufficient cut in Federal appropriations to permit a substantial slice in taxes. Andrews, now a Richmond accountant, last year headed a Hoover Commission group to seek improvement in General Accounting Office practices.

ODD LOTS: T. A. Cheatham of Peoples Drug Stores received honorable mention and a cash award in a national display contest sponsored by Chain Store Age . . . A group headed by Alex Brown & Sons and B. J. Van Ingen & Co. yesterday formally offered 23 million dollars of Elizabeth River Tunnel district bonds at 104½ to yield about 3.26 percent to maturity 30 years hence. Proceeds will help finance a bridge and tunnel between Portsmouth and Norfolk, Va. . . . Mansfield Tire & Rubber Co. has purchased tire and tube production of Inland Rubber Corp.

DIVIDENDS: Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a common share and regular quarterly dividends of 34¾ cents on 5½ per cent convertible preferred stock and 28⅛ cents on 4½ per cent convertible preferred stock. All dividends are payable March 31 to stock of record March 15.

INNOVATION: American Security & Trust Co. yesterday announced establishment of a discretionary common trust fund, under recently liberalized D. C. and Federal Reserve rules. "Purpose of the fund," said President Daniel W. Bell, "is to bring together assets of participating accounts into one common trust fund for investment." This will permit greater stability of income and safety of principal, he added, through a much broader diversification of investments than is now possible for accounts of moderate size when invested independently.

EARNINGS: United Fruit Co. reported net income of $54,852,363 or $6.25 a common share for 1949, against $59,740,231 or $6.81 a share in previous year. Other earnings statements:

Devaluation of British Pound Shook Faith in Labor Party

By J. A. Livingston

I'll NEVER forget coming down to breakfast in the Hotel Connaught, London, September 19. The night before, Chancellor of the Exchequer Cripps had made his announcement of the devaluation of the pound from $4.03 to $2.80. Stephen, the hall porter, who was running the elevator, said to me:

"What do you make of it, Mr. Livingston? Will we get through?

Livingston

I was thinking of the article I must cable home. Furthermore, I had not had my coffee. I replied: "Yes, Stephen, I'm sure you'll get through. People always do. They have to."

In the dining room, people eat their breakfast in grim silence while studying their newspapers. I couldn't refrain from calling back in my story: "The room was so still, you could hear the pound drop."

Now, five months later, the consequences of that action along with others, can be discerned in the election returns. The Labor Party has not fulfilled its high promises.

For so long, the pound had been regarded by every Briton, rich and poor, lord and laborer, as the arch of empire. Time and again, Cripps had said that he would not devalue. And then he had. To the voter—to Stephen, for instance—that was breaking faith.

Further, devaluation was symbolic. The Labor government had not, in nearly five years after the end of the war, cleared up the mess. The country still needed ECA help. It couldn't balance its own accounts. The British, famous for their independent little shopkeepers and workers, weren't standing on their own feet.

Not only that, but rations and price control continued. The government could talk about "fair shares for all." But standing in queues waiting for butter, bacon, or cigarettes is a constant irritation and a reminder of unsolved problems.

TOO, there has been dissatisfaction with the nationalization of industry. Though Prime Minister Attlee and Chancellor Cripps can cite ECA statistics showing that total British production is 30 per cent above prewar, the British voter knows that since the war Britain has not had enough coal to meet export goals and home requirements comfortably. Inference: Nationalization had failed.

The Labor Party had to bear the brunt of Britain's belated realization of its new place in the world. Economically and politically, the British now play second fiddle to the United States and Russia. The people don't like it. And they're not sure that even as second fiddlers, Attlee, Cripps, and Foreign Minister Bevin play the right notes.

Britain hasn't achieved a successful relationship either with Russia or with Europe. And just prior to the election, Paul G. Hoffman, head of ECA, let it be known that Britain was not going along with his program for European economic integration. Some voters must have wondered: Do we have a foreign policy at all?

Essentially, the Labor Party is a victim of Britain's economic change of life. Two wars have transformed the nation from a creditor to a debtor country, from a great industrial power to a lesser power. Investment income no longer pays for imports. So the British have to stint. The stinting shows up in regulations, restrictions, and frustrations. We, in America, reacted similarly to OPA. Why, we wanted to know, did we have to have it when the war was over?

THE CLOSE election adds to the Labor Party's difficulties. True, party discipline in England is strict. Customarily M.P.'s vote their party line. But in Britain, unlike in the United States, the secretaries and the under-secretaries of departments—like the Treasury, the Board of Trade, Health, Labor, Transport, etc. — not only run their departments, but also are members of Parliament. There are 65 of them. Their votes are essential on vital issues. Yet they have to spend time in their offices signing papers, directing policy, conferring with permanent officials.

They can't be in Parliament constantly. If only half are out attending to administrative business at one time, and the Conservatives call for a quick vote, the Labor Party will be licked. If that were to happen frequently, the government would have to resign. So British ministers now will hesitate to go abroad for foreign conferences when Parliament's in session. Their votes would be too valuable at home.

The dilemma is this: To keep its control of Parliament, Labour will have to run the risk of losing control — efficiency—in government, which would hardly sit well with an electorate already on the fence about the party's postwar performance.

Churches to Hold Midweek Services

Postlude

Philadelphia Group Awes Audience

By Paul Hume

Of the greatness of Tschaikowsky's Sixth Symphony there is little question today.

Eugene Ormandy closed his all-Tschaikowsky concert with the moody score last night, conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall. The composer himself felt he had never written a better symphony. He was right in his judgment.

The music has form, unusual character, and a high degree of originality. The temptation is always to applaud after its heroic third movement, cast in the form of a march. And when the brooding notes of the cellos and double basses have died away at its conclusion, there are many who cannot bring themselves to clap hands.

The performance last night was a rich one. The Philadelphia Orchestra has played this music many times in the half-century of concert giving. They will no doubt play it many times in the future.

Ormandy took the opening movement quite diffidently until the true climax over the sustained tympani roll. It is possible to view the work in this light, but earlier climaxes seem lightly passed over in such a reading.

The waltz was surely too slow. It is marked "allegro con grazioso." Ormandy read it more "moderato" Robbing it of its rightful grace. Nor did constant modulations of tempo help achieve the right end.

The march and finale were complete triumphs. There was a rigid adherence to tempo throughout the martial section, even at the climax? This is always a test spot, and Ormandy held his first pace with inescapable excitement as the just reward of his fidelity.

The closing movement rose and fell in powerful waves. Coming at the close of a concert which included the fourth symphony and an overture, Orishnik, it was an awesome evening.

Prince Georges Schools Ask $5.4 Million

A Prince Georges County school budget calling for expenditure of $5,435,731 was presented to the county commissioners yesterday by Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools.

The budget will be divided so that the State and other sources will provide $3,023,722 and the actual county levy would be $2,412,009.

In the covering letter, Shugart pointed out that the budget represents $827,092 more than the amount "we are presently operating on but only $448,993 more than was requested for this year. Of this increase $445,383 is expected from the State and $391,709 is requested from the county."

Shugart said that school enrollment next year is expected to reach 31,500, an increase of 4000 more than had been estimated for this year but 3000 more than the actual enrollment. "Provision has been made for 110 more teachers than we now have and 130 more than were anticipated when the current budget was prepared," Shugart said.

County Orders Study of Trash Collections

A survey of trash removal and disposal in Montgomery County was ordered yesterday by the County Council.

At the same time, the council rejected an application by Blake D. Merson for a license to operate a dump at Beantown, near Rockville.

Merson was granted permission, however, to operate a dump in conformity with existing laws on a month-to-month basis, pending completion of the survey.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr was directed to ascertain the adequacy of private dumping facilities and the necessity of the county's establishing a collection service and dump or incinerator together with the costs involved.

The council deferred action until next Tuesday on an application by the Board of Education for $2,911,000 in State loans and grants for school construction.

Economic Unit Denies Charge Of Socialism

By The Associated Press

President Truman's council of economic advisers yesterday disputed Republican claims that the Democratic Administration is leading the Nation down the road to socialism.

The council said that the economic program outlined by Mr. Truman merely follows the objective set by Congress in the 1946 employment act.

This act directed the President and his economic advisers "to promote maximum employment, production, and purchasing power . . . in a manner calculated to foster and promote free competitive enterprise."

"We not only agree with the desirability of this objective," the council said, "but believe that it is attainable. We are working to the best of our abilities to suggest means of attaining it."

The council's views were released by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee as part of a report on hearings held by the committee last month.

The council also said:

1. The coal strike has changed the optimistic outlook for business in the first half of this year.

2. The automobile market may not continue at its present level if present prices are maintained.

3. In the long-range view, steel "is clearly one area where price reductions will be necessary."

The report was given to the committee by the council's two members, acting chairman Leon H. Keyserling and John D. Clark. Dr. Edwin G. Nourse recently resigned as chairman of the council and criticized the Administration's general economic policies.

Foley Buys Harlan Stone House Here

Undersecretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley, jr., has purchased the residence of the late Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone at 2340 Wyoming ave. nw., it was learned yesterday.

The property was sold on behalf of Mrs. Stone by Sandoz, Inc., realtors.

The sale price was not disclosed. But the property has an assessed valuation of over $104,000 for tax purposes, the realty firm said.

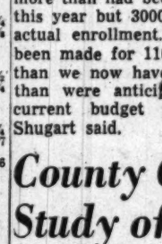
The Foleys now live at 10 Thompson Circle.

The brick mansion was built by Justice Stone in 1927. One of its best-known features is a large two-story library used by Stone for storage of books. The house has 16 rooms, five baths and two lavatories. A walled-in garden is included with the property.

Mrs. Stone is now living at 2029 Connecticut ave. nw., where she recently moved from the house.

Stahl to Direct Red Cross Drive In Arlington

Appointment of Carrington P. Stahl as chairman of the 1950 Red Cross fund-raising campaign in Arlington was announced yesterday by W. W. McCollum, chairman of the county Red Cross Chapter.



Stahl

Stahl, manager of the Arlington business office of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., also served as chairman of the 1949 drive. He is a member of both the board of directors and the executive committee of the Arlington Red Cross chapter.

Appointed as vice-chairman for the new drive was. Mrs Henry S. Liebschutz, 1222 S. 26th rd., who will be serving for the fourth consecutive year in this capacity. The quota for the campaign is $25,700.

Candidate Withdraws

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The number of council candidates in the field for the Democratic primary in April has been reduced to 14 with the announced withdrawal of Charles Lanahan. A candidate for nomination in the First Ward, Lanahan advised that he had purchased a house and is moving into another section of the city.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

God Has Hundreds of Way of Plucking at the Sleeves of Man

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Peter Marshall

THE ROCK THAT MOVED

There are not many cities in which you may suddenly hear the crowing of a cock.
That is one sound that is not likely to arouse the guests in any of Washington's downtown hotels.
One will never hear it in Times Square at Broad and Market at Five Points at Woodward and Michigan or along Michigan Boulevard
Yet even to this day you may hear it in Jerusalem, for Jerusalem is different.
God had a hundred ways of plucking at a man's sleeve. He nudges some.
Others He taps on the shoulder.
To some it comes in music, to some in a picture, a story or a chance meeting on the street.
All these are used by God Who keeps watch over His own.
Yes . . . to some it is music . . . or a song.
To others it is a picture or the face of a friend but to Simon Peter it was the crowing of a cock.
He had seen the last flickering torch disappear round the turn of the path that wound down hill.
Only once in a while could the lights of the procession be seen through the trees—like giant fireflies.
The murmur of voices died away the crackling of twigs and the rustling of dislodged stones through the grass.
There swept over Peter the realization that his Master had at last been captured and was marching away to die
The icy fear that gripped his heart was a startling contrast to the flaming courage with which he drew his short sword a few minutes before, for this was a different Peter.
He realized that he had blundered, and that he had been rebuked.
Disappointed and puzzled, he could not understand the calm submission with which Christ permitted them to bind His hands and march Him off, as a butcher would lead an animal to the slaughter.
And now, they brought the Lord from Annas to Caiaphas, and the soldiers and the temple guards mingled with the servants in the courtyard.
Because the night was cold, they had kindled a fire in the brazier, and Peter joined himself to the group, and stretching out his hands warmed himself at their fire.
Coarse laughter greeted every joke and they discussed the thing such people talk about:
the coming cock-fight in Jerusalem
the new dancing girl in the court of Herod the prowess of the garrison's drivers the gambling losses of their friends the latest news from Rome.
Peter was not paying much attention to their conversation until one of the soldiers nudged him and said:
"Thou art also of them."
And Peter said, for the second time: "Man, I am not."

* * *

Peter, you must remember . . . surely . . . it must ba that you are afraid.
Your brave heart must have turned to water.
Surely you cannot have forgotten . . .
Remember the night He came walking on the water, and you tried it, and were walking, like the Master, until your courage left you . . . your faith gave way?
Simon, has your courage left you again?
After an hour had passed, there joined the group a soldier who had come out of the palace.
As he greeted his friends in the circle, his eye fell on Peter. He scrutinized him very carefully, and Peter, feeling the examination of the newcomer, looked round as the soldier asked: "Did not I see thee in the garden with Him?"
One of his friends joined in:
"Certainly—he's one of the Galileans.
Just listen to his accent."
And the soldier subbornly went on: "I am sure I saw him in the garden, for my kinsman, Malchus, was wounded by one of them—who drew a sword, and if I am not mistaken—it was this fellow here."
Then Peter, beginning to curse and to swear, said:
"I know not the man."
He used language he had not used for years.
It was vile . . . Even the soldiers were shocked.
They all looked at him in amazement.
They did not appear to notice the shuffling of feet, as soldiers led Christ from Caiaphas to Pilate.
Perhaps they did not make much noise. They were tired worn with argument and talk so they were very quiet.
Immediately, Peter remembered the Lord's prophecy:
"Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny Me thrice."
Like a wave there swept over him the realization of what he had done.
All of a sudden he remembered what Jesus had said, and with tears streaming down his face, he turned away from the fire.
Through a mist of tears he saw ahead of him the stairway that led to Pilate's palace . . .
and by a terrible Providence, it was just at that moment that Christ was being led up the stairs to appear before Pilate.
The Lord had heard!
The Lord had heard every hot searing word . . .
The Lord had heard the blistering denial . . .
the foul, fisherman's oaths . . .
He—He had heard it all!
Christ paused on the stair, and looked down over the rail—looked right into the very soul of Peter.
The eyes of the two met . . . at that awful moment.
The world seemed to stand still, as for that terrible moment, Peter looked at the One he denied.
We shall never know what passed between them.
Christ seemed to say again:
"But I have prayed for thee, Simon.
Satan hath desired to have thee.
But I have prayed for thee."
His tears now overflowed and ran down his cheeks—hot and scalding tears they were—and with great sobs shaking his strong frame, Peter spun round and rushed out to have the cool morning air fan his burning cheeks.
Something died within the heart of Peter that night.
Something was killed. That's why his heart was broken.
In fact, the Simon in him was killed
the old arrogant boasting bravado of Simon the cocksure confidence of the strong fisherman the impetuous stubborness the impulsive thoughtlessness of Simon . . .
these all died in that moment.
Simon had ceased to be. Peter was being born.

Nothing more is heard of Peter for two days.
Christ has been crucified.
But we must follow Peter further. It is not fair to leave him a sinner, a swearing traitor, a fugitive from the heart of love.
This apprentice apostle is still in the making.
And he is running true to form.
His Lord had prayed that somehow he should not fail.
That prayer must be—would be answered—but how?
Never again would his Master trust him.
There came the strange story gasped out by breathless women who had come running from the tomb.
Then a race with John and the discovery of the empty grave . . .
Then the strange tale of the two disciples who came back from Emmaus.
Something had happened.
Life could never be the same again.
The dead had come to life.
The Christ who had been crucified was alive, but still Simon could only nurse his deep and bitter shame.
There came that night when, having gone back to their boats and their nets, they had worked hard and in comparative silence. Now as they came back, discouraged and sad, they saw Someone standing on the beach in the early light of morning. The sea was calm—calm as a millpond—and the light, early morning mist still clung to the surface of the water.
"It is the Lord," said John, and that was enough for Simon.
Here was the opportunity for which he had longed—to tell the Lord that he loved Him—to show how well he knew Him.
Without a moment's hesitation, he jumped overboard and waded ashore. And then comes the loveliest record of God dealing with a penitent sinner . . .
Its tenderness and understanding come stealing into our own hearts like the perfume of crushed flowers.
For every denial, Jesus asked a pledge of love.
Three times the question: "Simon, . . . lovest thou Me?"
Three times the answer—and then the restoration.
"Feed my lambs . . . Feed my sheep . . . Feed my sheep."
And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, "Follow Me."

When next we see Simon, he is Simon no more—but Peter—the Rock.
We see him fearless and eloquent fire in his eyes and his voice vibrant with conviction melodious with good news.
His own will has gone; his Master's will has taken its place.
Peter stands up and preaches the gospel of his crucified and risen Lord.
Is this Simon preaching a sermon?
No, this is Peter.
The sinner-saint has become a witness a pillar of strength to the brethren and apostle to the ages.
The denials that you have made were made by Simon.
Yet he was restored; so may you be restored.
Christ changed Simon into Peter,
the sinner into the saint.
He can change your life, if you are willing!

Hooper Rating Service Is Sold

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The familiar Hooper ratings of countless radio programs will bow out of the national field this week in order to concentrate on local operations.

Sale of the National Network Radio, Pacific Network Radio, and Television Network Reporting Services of C. E. Hooper, Inc., to A. C. Nielsen Co. was jointly announced by the two firms today.

It will end the competition between "Program Hooperatings" and the "National Nielsen-Ratings Reports" as dual yardsticks for the national popularity of programs. The Nielsen ratings will be made available to former subscribers to the Program Hooperatings.

Hooper will retain his city audience measurement services for both radio and television, as well as a number of other audience research services for the industry.

Let Us Give

The ever-watchful Red Cross is . . . A symbol of our land . . . Forever faithful in its task . . . To lend a helping hand . . . To sacrifice by day and night . . . With time and energy . . . For all the stranded victims of . . . A sudden tragedy . . . To nurse the sick and aid the poor . . . In fire, flood or blast . . . To heal the wounded in a war . . . And keep their courage fast . . . The Red Cross of America . . . Deserves our highest praise . . . But also it should have our help . . . In more substantial ways . . . Especially our pledges of . . . The money we can spare . . . To serve our neighbors and to do . . . Our patriotic share.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

As Usual, the Lady Had The Last Word

The little girl handed the streetcar operator a transfer and continued on back into the car.

She had just found a seat when the operator called her back. "I'm sorry, little girl," he said, "but I can't accept this transfer. It's too old."

The child put up a good defense, but the operator was insistent. Meantime, they had gone another block, more passengers had gotten on the car, and the little girl's seat was taken by a newcomer.

"See what you've done?" she said. "You've caused me to lose my seat. I used to think the Russians were the meanest people in the world, but now I think it's people like you."

The startled operator blinked, and mulled the tirade over for a few moments. Then he solemnly replied:

"Okay—you win. And to show you how sorry I am that you lost your seat, you get first crack at the next vacant seat. How's that?"

"That's more like it," said the little girl. And with just the right degree of hauteur, she withdrew from the field of battle.

A GOOD PHOTOGRAPHER MAKES HIS OWN LUCK

Now that Post Photographer Gene Jones has walked off with all those prizes, it might be well to tell a little story that helps to explain his success.

My family and I had attended a downtown movie one Saturday night, and afterward stopped to buy a copy of The Washington Post. On Page One was an accident picture by Gene.

As we rode home, my 13-year-old relative (who is also a photographer of sorts) asked:

"How does that guy Jones always manage to be on hand when there's an accident? He sure is lucky."

"I wouldn't call it luck," I replied. "He spends practically all his waking hours cruising around with police and rescue squads, waiting for an emergency to happen. And when it happens, he's Johnny-on-the-spot. Is that luck or hard work?"

"Well," conceded the boy, "I guess that's hard work. But do you mean to say that—tonight for instance—he's cruising around watching for a chance to make a picture?"

We had stopped for a red light at 7th and the Avenue; before I could answer, an ambulance pulled up alongside us and Gene Jones stuck his head out of the window.

"Hiyah, Bill," he called. "It sure is quiet tonight, isn't it?"

My 13-year-old catches on quick. "I see what you mean," he murmured.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Handsome large black dog, short-haired, gentle, loves children; must have space to run—he's big." (Shepherd 3749).

"Three nice tan-and-black striped tiger kittens, 4 months old; will deliver." (Taylor 6610).

"Healthy, gentle mother cat needs place to have her kittens. Will give $5 and 24 cans of cat food for kind home." (Emerson 8706).

PERSONAL NOTES

Martin Davidson, 6001 Henning st., Bethesda, Md.: The managing editor will be glad to get your letter, "irate" or not, because he always likes to keep in touch with the preferences of his readers. But I predict that his answer will be that no newspaper can include everything that everybody would like to see in it each day. Those things judged to be of least general interest must be left out, and that's one of the things an editor gets paid for—to be the judge.

Edmund D. Doyle, 1630 Oak st. nw.: Thanks for the kind note.

SMILE, DARN ME

Hazel Woodville of 4311 34th st., Brentwood, Md., doesn't mind my joshing National Smile Week, but she'd like to make sure that everybody understands that I wasn't really serious. She reminds us:

"The thing that goes the farthest . . . Toward making life worthwhile . . . That costs the least and does the most . . . Is just a pleasant smile."

NUTS TO THE NATS?

Mary Tankersley of 47 Wheatley st., Kensington, Md., shudders at the suggestion that the Nats whip their peanut shell problems by getting the fans to eat coconuts instead.

"Heavens," says Mary, "can't you just picture what would happen to the first umpire who called a bad one in a close game?"

PUN FUN

Voncile R. Kitchens of 154 Williams st., Alexandria, Va., puts a novel twist on the outlandish suggestion that contributors to this column should be paid. She says:

I'll write for gold,
But not for free;
I'd like to say
A bill paid me.

Johnson Urged to Define Policy

By Drew Pearson

Editor's Note: Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter to Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson on the all-important problem of our Russian relations and future war.

Dear Louis:

Maybe I am hipped on this subject, but I am convinced that in this day of threatened atomic-hydrogen war, it is vital that we as a Nation chart a more definite course in our relations with Russia and that the American people be informed of that course.

Johnson

You and I don't always agree, but in this country, thank goodness, sincerity is much more important than agreement; and you and I have always been frank with each other.

To be bluntly frank, therefore, the American people are confused over the fact that after long delays in appointing civilian defense executives, we are now getting up an alternate capital of the United States; we are microfilming essential documents for safekeeping away from Washington; and we are planning a series of underground garages as potential air-raid shelters.

Naturally this has people worried. And I confess that every Sunday I am torn between two difficult alternatives:

1. Telling the people the truth about the pessimistic world picture and increasing their worry, or

2. Painting a more optimistic picture even if it is not entirely accurate.

That is why I took the liberty of writing to Dean Acheson the other day, urging that a new and more concrete policy be charted, and then explained fully to the American people.

Now, I am not proposing to tell you what that course should be. I don't know what it should be. And I doubt if you or Dean at the present time know. It is the most difficult question the Cabinet and the country faces—whether to hold a conference with Russia which undoubtedly would be a failure; whether to force an early showdown which might lead to war; whether to continue an expensive battle of economics and nerves on a far-flung front extending from Japan to Norway and from Indonesia to North Africa.

Those are problems which are very easy to discuss in editorial columns or in smoking-car compartments where no decisions have to be made. But when the discussion takes place on the level of the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense, where men's lives may be at stake, then my sympathies are with you. I am glad I am not in your shoes.

I have noted with some amusement the pinpricks of my columnist colleagues, the Alsop brothers, at your efforts to scale down our huge military budget. And I also remember those who panned you when you insisted on preparedness prior to 1941. Pearl Harbor proved you were right then, and I am hoping that events will prove you right now. Certainly the Nation admired your courageous fight for civilian rule in the Navy.

But all this admirable effort on your part may blow up in smoke if we are immersed in another cut-throat arms race.

That does not mean we should hold limitation of atomic-bomb conferences with Russia, merely for the sake of pacifying public opinion. As a young newspaperman, I attended most of the early arms conferences—the Washington Naval Conference of 1921 presided over by Charles Evans Hughes; the Coolidge Naval Conference in Geneva in 1927; the Kellogg Pact Conference; and the London Naval Conference of 1930.

Most of them ended in partial or complete failure.

But even though those conferences failed, they had two all-important effects which made them worth while:

1. They convinced the rest of the world of our sincerity in groping, pushing, working for peace. They gave us new prestige in the moral leadership of the world.

2. They inspired the American people and kept our moral fibre from bogging down.

That is why I think most people applaud your sincerity in trying to prune the deadwood from our military budget at a time when pruning is not fashionable.

That is also why I think we are fortunate in having under you today the highest type military men I have ever seen serving the Army, Navy and Air Forces.

Furthermore, I am sure they would be the first to welcome some way of telling the American people just what lies ahead—what weapons must be discarded, what weapons we should rely on in the future, what steps we must take toward diversifying industry against atom raids; how far we can go in penetrating the Iron Curtain to reach the Russian people; and whether we face a long 50-year war of nerves or an early showdown of force over the vital question of whether the majority or brutality shall rule the world.

These are some of the things the American people want to know, and have a right to know. I am certain you are among those who would like to help tell them.

Sincerely,
DREW PEARSON.
